PREFACE.

To the Class of 1880:—

I have now issued four class reports and, in so doing, have received from you upwards of four hundred variously worded apologies for tardiness in answering my circulars. From the forms you have supplied I think I can frame a tolerable excuse for my own delay in presenting this report. The trouble originally was procrastination, and I might even plead that I caught this malady from the persistent epidemic of it which appears to afflict the class, for my previous reports have been prompt to a day. Procrastination, however, accounts for only a short delay, for the report was so far advanced at Commencement that it could have been ready in a fortnight. I abandoned duty for pleasure and took a summer vacation in July, after which followed two or three weeks' more delay, due solely to inertia and a disinclination to take up a half finished task in the midsummer heat. I should be much disturbed, however, if any of you were to think from this that the task is irksome, or that my position as secretary is not always a pleasure to me as well as an honor.

The delay has not been without some gain, for, in spite of the formidable summons and complaint, in due legal form, which was served on you this year, many of your answers were not received until long after Commencement, and could not have been included in this report if it had been promptly issued. There are still several who have not answered, and there are also a few whose names are omitted altogether, at their own request, from the body of the report They are mostly men who dropped down to us unwillingly from a higher class and whose hearts still yearn for their friends in '79, but there are others also. You will remember that in 1883 a classmate wrote that he owed nothing to the class and that as he remembered it "it was composed of the petted heirs of aristocracy who knew more of midnight revels in college club rooms and the slums of Boston than of the courses of study that would have made them men worthy of either acquaintance or respect." This year another writes that he "objects decidedly to having his life dogged by a class report," and continues: "If a man's neighbors, out of an amiable desire to know something of the lives of the various residents in the ward, and thinking themselves entitled to such knowledge because they lived in the same ward, were to insist, notwithstanding his protests, upon finding out and publishing from time to time the main events in his life, I am sure the most ardent advocate of class reports would think those neighbors somewhat impertinent. I am entirely unable to see any distinction in principle between the act supposed and that of a class in asserting a right to keep trace of a man because of the accident of a temporary association." I entirely agree with him in thinking that the class has no such right, and I have respected his wish. In most cases, however, the failure to send information for the report is due only to indifference, and, to borrow the expression of a brother secretary, the indifference which allows its possessor to receive three circulars and an autograph letter from a classmate without even an acknowledgment, has no right to feel offended because hearsay information is printed, from any available source, in the absence of anything more reliable.

The Class Committee has exercised the power given it at the class dinner a year ago by adding to its number Richard M. Saltonstall. The fact that all the members of the Class Committee, including the secretary, lived at a distance from Cambridge, made it desirable to add some one from Boston who could personally superintend the Commencement spreads.

The amount unpaid on your subscriptions made ten years ago to the class and college funds is discouraging. In spite of semi-annual reminders of your indebtedness many of you seem to consider the account as something to be paid only when perfectly convenient, and forget that obligations have been entered into and expenses incurred on the strength of your subscriptions. I shall attempt this summer to collect the unpaid balance by personal letters, and shall be really grateful to any of you who will save me the trouble by closing your account at once.

I am indebted to the class secretaries of 1877 and 1882 for permission to use the negatives of heliotypes prepared for their reports, issued this year.

Our next report will appear in 1895.

Yours most truly,

FREDERIC ALMY,

Secretary.

[The information contained in the following pages was received in reply to this circular:]

SUPREME COURT, STATE OF NEW YORK.

FREDERIC ALMY,
Plaintiff,
AGAINST
HARVARD COLLEGE: CLASS OF 1880,
Defendant.

TO THE ABOVE-NAMED DEFENDANT:

You are hereby summoned, to answer the complaint in this action and the interrogatories annexed thereto and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service; and in case of your failure to answer, information will be entered against you by hearsay in regard to the interrogatories annexed to the complaint.

Dated the 31st day of March, 1890.

FREDERIC ALMY,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P.O. Address, 24 Law Exchange,
Buffalo, N. Y.

SUPREME COURT, STATE OF NEW YORK.

FREDERIC ALMY,
AGAINST
HARVARD COLLEGE: CLASS OF 1880.

COMPLAINT:

From the Preface to the 1886 Class Report:

"If you would only do me the kindness to answer when you are spoken to, my class work would be rid of its only annoyance. In 1883 half of you waited for a fourth circular before replying, and forty for personal letters. This year [1886] I sent out a circular that would move hearts of stone, and many of you succumbed at once, but the rest waited as usual and the chief fruit of my pathos is a large crop of amusing apologies. I go to press, as before, with nearly one-fourth of the class proper not yet heard from. When so many do not answer it makes it difficult to know who are lost and who are merely lying low. In 1890 I shall serve subpœnas by a sheriff.

"I have a strong fellow-feeling for the reticence which dislikes the publication of personal items and believes that friends who are interested have sufficient opportunities for keeping posted without official bulletins. And yet, notwithstanding, I believe in class reports. I am very glad to be able to keep trace of the whereabouts and fortunes of friends whom I knew pleasantly in college, but should have almost forgotten, in so large a class, without this aid. Moreover, as long as I am retained by the class I intend to get an answer for my report from every man who can be induced to give one; and where a man will neither answer nor decline to answer I consider myself justified in printing hearsay."

INTERROGATORIES:

[Please write on one side of the page only, and in such form that your letter can be taken directly to the printer.]

1.—Residence and occupation since 1886. When and where admitted as a member of your profession or business. If in business, with what firm.

2.—If married since last report, give time and place, residence and maiden name of wife, and her parents' names in full; names of children since last report, with dates of birth; death of wife or children, with dates.

3.—Journeys made in foreign countries. Give dates.

4.—Offices which you have held, with times of appointment and continuance; college degrees received, membership of clubs and societies.

5.—Political, scientific, literary or commercial activity; authorship of books, pamphlets, magazine articles, etc., with exact titles and dates of publication; addresses made before public meetings.

6.—Any other circumstances or experiences which may be interesting to the class.

7.—Your name, with title, if any, and address for the next five years.

RECORD OF THE CLASS.

1886—1890.

FREDERICK H. ALLEN.

New York, April 16.—"I have been living continuously in New York since 1886, and following the practice of my profession.

"I have been four times to Europe, three times on business and once for pleasure."

RUSSELL C. ALLEN.

El Cajon, Cal., May 31.—"Am still engaged in fruit growing, especially raisins and olives, at El Cajon, Cal. Am in the business of packing and shipping raisins with Herbert Dabney. Firm name, Allen & Dabney.

"Was married February 28, 1888, in Cambridge to Ella Bradford Copeland, daughter of Robert Morris and Josephine Gannett (Kent) Copeland. I have two children, Morris Copeland Allen, born January 11, 1889, and Richard Minot Allen, born April 24, 1890.

"Made a trip in Mexico as far as the capital and Guadalajara with our class-mate Winsor in April, 1890."

WILLIAM H. ALLEY.

Chicago, Ill., April 8.—"I still retain my position as President of the Indiana & Illinois Southern Railroad, and am also a member of the firm of Alley Bros. & Place of Boston.

"In the winter of 1887 and 1888 I took a trip through Mexico."

FREDERIC ALMY.

Buffalo, June 20—"I left the law office of Sprague, Morey & Sprague, November 1, 1887, and formed a partnership with C. H. Keep, Harvard, '82, under the firm name of Almy & Keep, which continued until March 1, 1890. During the year 1889 I was Secretary of the Lake Carriers' Association, an organization composed of the leading vessel owners on the Great Lakes. For over two years I have been Secretary of the Buffalo Civil Service Reform Association, and I have been a member of the Saturn Club of Buffalo since its organization in 1885. I am also a member of the Thursday Club and Cleveland Democracy of this city, and am on committees of the Charity Organization and Unitarian Aid Societies.

"I sailed for Liverpool from New York on the City of Rome, July 11, 1888, and spent the summer walking in England, Wales and Scotland, with Norton, '80 and a Yale graduate of '83. The most enjoyable weeks of our trip were those spent in Wales and Devonshire. We landed in Boston September 17, 1888.

"I tried my first case of importance (I might almost say my first case of any kind) last month, assisted by an older lawyer, and had a verdict directed in my favor against this county for $211,850.70, besides costs for nineteen years, which have not yet been adjusted. The plaintiff has always succeeded in the higher courts and will undoubtedly hold his verdict.

"I have just contributed to volume twelve of the American and English Encyclopædia of Law an article of about 120 pages on Statutes of Limitation."

WILLIAM S. ANDREWS.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 15.— Is still practicing law in Syracuse as a member of the firm of Knapp, Nottingham & Andrews.

CHARLES E. ATWOOD.

EXETER, N. H., June 16.—"I have resided in Exeter, N. H., since 1886, and as to occupation am of the staff of the Exeter News-Letter and correspondent for Exeter and vicinity of the Boston Herald."

ROBERT BACON.

Boston, April 5.— Has been a member of the firm of E. Rollins Morse & Brother, bankers and brokers, Boston, since November, 1883. "I have another son, Elliot Cowdin Bacon, born July 4, 1888, in Boston. I was elected an Overseer of the College last Commencement."

HENRY C. BALDWIN.

Boston, April 30.—"I spent the summer of 1886 in travel on the Continent and in Norway, and the autumn in travel in Spain and Sicily. I passed the winter in India, returning home in June, 1887, by the way of China and Japan.

"The summer of 1887 I spent in Dublin, Ireland, as house physician in the Rotunda Lying-in Hospital.

"I began the private practice of medicine in November, 1887, at 172 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston. I am Assistant in the Department for Nervous Diseases at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Physician to the Boston Dispensary, and Surgeon to out patients at the Free Hospital for Women"

MORTON BARROWS.

St. Paul, Minn., April 12.—Is practicing law in St. Paul. Has two children, Marjorie, born September 5, 1886, and Dorothy, born January 12, 1888. Was Secretary and Treasurer of the Minnesota Harvard Club, for the year 1888–1889.

HENRY T. BARSTOW.

Has not been heard from. Is practicing medicine in Boston.

NATHANIEL C. BARTLETT.

Haverhill, Mass., April 7.—"Since 1886 I have continued to reside at Haverhill, Mass., in which city I have practiced law since my admission to the bar, September 12, 1882. I have had several clerks — male and female, but no partner of either kind. I am at present a member of the Common Council, of Ward One in this city, elected December 6, 1889, to serve for the year 1890 — my first term.

"I am a member of the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and Improved Order of Red Men — also of two social clubs 'The Wachusett' and 'The Mondamin.' I am also Secretary of the Republican City Committee.

"My principal attention has been given to the law, though I have bought, sold and cared for real estate to some extent; and I have done some work of a literary nature in the way of compiling local history."

CHARLES F. T. BEALE.

Hudson, N. Y., April 17. — "Since 1886 I have resided in Hudson, Columbia County, New York, and have been engaged partly in the practice of my profession (law), but since January 1, 1889, have been engaged in manufacturing and selling knit underwear. My partner's name is James A. Hover, and our mill is located at Columbiaville, Columbia County, New York.

"There has been no increase nor decrease in my family during the past three years. Have one boy, born January 29, 1885. I have traveled extensively over the United States, but have not been in foreign lands.

"Am Captain of the 23d Separate Company, Infantry, N. G. S. N. Y., member of the Board of Education of the City of Hudson, N. Y., member of the Hudson Club, Hudson Thirteen Club, and have held the principal offices in the 'York Rite' in Masonry, and many in the 'Scottish Rite.'

"Am Vice-President of the Republican League Club of the city of Hudson, N. Y., and take a great interest in political matters.

GERARD BEMENT.

BOSTON, MASS., April 5.—"Since the publication of our last report in 1886 I have continued to practice law, and have lived in Boston, where I was married January 12, 1887, to Katherine Baker Pfaff.

"I spent the summer of 1889 traveling in Europe."

CHARLES H. BENTON.

HEADINGLEY, ENG., July 3.—Is living at Headingley, Yorkshire, England, and is engaged at engine making in Leeds, having removed to the North from London some two years since. The address may be taken as 127 Water Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

SHERRARD BILLINGS.

GROTON, MASS., May 19.—"Since 1886, as for two years before that, I have been teaching at Groton School. I am not married. I was abroad in England and on the Continent in the summer of 1887."

ROBERT ROBERTS BISHOP.

BOSTON, May 19.—"Soon after our second triennial in 1886 I left Boston to take charge of the New York branch of the Boston Terra Cotta Company, in which corporation I had had a business interest ever since leaving Cambridge in 1880, and the following three years were spent in New York City, with occasional trips South and West.

"Having severed my connection with the Boston Terra Cotta Company I returned to Boston in the fall of 1889 and entered the commission house of L. C. Chase & Co., which firm controls the woolen and mohair products of the Sanford Mills of Maine.

"I reside in Newton, Mass., and am a member of the Puritan and Algonquin Clubs of Boston."

HERBERT P. BISSELL.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 5.—"Since graduation I have resided at Buffalo, N. Y. July 1, 1886, I became a member of the law firm of Brundage, Weaver & Bissell, and January 1, 1887, the junior member of the firm with which I am now associated (Bissell, Sicard, Brundage & Bissell).

"A second daughter, Harriott Amelia Bissell, was born September 3, 1888.

"I was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of DeVeaux College in 1887, and delivered the annual address at that institution on Founder's Day of that year. In 1889 I was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of Cary Collegiate Institute at Oakfield, N. Y. I have been elected to membership in several clubs as follows: The Buffalo Club, Saturn Club, Buffalo Historical Society, Liedertafel, Orpheus, New York Reform Club, Buffalo Athletic Club.

"I have made some political speeches in the National and State campaigns."

CHARLES B. BLAIR.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 28.—"I was admitted to the bar in August, 1883, (our last class catalogue had it 1885) and have practiced law ever since. I hung out my own sign April, 1889, and have been swinging alone since.

"I was married June 5, 1889, in this city, to Miss Emma Covode, daughter of John Covode (deceased) and Margaret A. Covode (née Peale), formerly of Lockport Station, near Pittsburgh, Pa. A son was born April 12, 1890 — Charles Covode Blair.

"Am a member of the Peninsular Club of Grand Rapids."

WILLIAM T. BLODGETT.

NEW YORK, June 10.—"Since 1885 I have been a farmer and stockman in Stanton County, Nebraska. Owing to long winters and inclement weather in that State, have given up business this spring.

"I was Justice of the Peace of Maple Creek Precinct, in Stanton County, Nebraska, for three successive years, but my constables and myself had a very peaceful time of it."

HUGH LENNOX BOND.

BALTIMORE, April 22.—"Since the date of our last report I have continued to practice law as assistant to the general counsel in the law department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., at Baltimore.

"On the 4th of June, 1884, at Hudson, N. Y., I married Miss Jessie Van Rennselaer Beale, of that city, second daughter of Charles Louis and Catherine Wilder Beale. We have two children,— Eloise Beale, born July 18, 1885, and Annie Penniman, born November 2, 1886."

FRANK H. BRACKETT.

Has not been heard from. Has been teaching music in Boston this winter, but owing to ill health this spring was obliged to give up for a while, and is visiting relatives in Portsmouth, N. H.

RUSSELL BRADFORD.

BOSTON, April 16.—"Since 1886 I have resided in Cambridge and practiced law in Boston."

*CHARLES W. BRADLEY.

Died in Somerville, Mass., September 22, 1884. See report III., pp. 25–28.

The following sonnet by William Cranston Lawton, '73, who was with Bradley in Asia Minor in 1881, appeared in the Atlantic Monthly for March, 1888.

CAROLO MORTUO.

Together, comrade, widely did we roam.
In Gothic aisles, at wayside shrines, and where
The slender minarets pierce the dusky air,
And Moslem kneel beneath Sofia's dome;
At vesper chant, 'mid hooded monks of Rome,
We bowed together, reverencing there
Through myriad creeds and tongues the soul of prayer;
And every land of men to us was home.
A heavier curtain now thy hands upraise;
Into a darker minster stray thy feet.
May loving eyes and clasp of welcome greet
The lover of all mortal hearts and ways,
And knowledge widen to his eager gaze
Who followed truth with tireless step and fleet.

AMOS F. BREED, JR.

Boston, Mass., June 11.—"I engaged in the leather business in March, 1889, being a member of the firm of Breed & Badger. In December, 1889, having been burned out by the Lynn fire, we removed our business to Boston, where we are at present located."

CLIFFORD BRIGHAM.

Boston, May 20.—Is practicing law in Boston and Salem, Mass.; lives at Salem, and is a member of the Common Council and of the local Board of Civil Service Examiners of that city.

NAT M. BRIGHAM.

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 22.—"My residence and place of business are in Salt Lake City. Am associated with Thos. J. Mackintosh, in the oil business, under the firm name of Brigham & Mackintosh, Utah Oil Tank Line Co. Have recently bought out the Salt Lake Oil Co. Am unmarried."

LOUIS M. BROWN.

Glens Falls, N.Y., April 8.—"Since 1886 I have resided at Glens Falls, N. Y., and have been engaged in practicing law."

PHILIP T. BUCKLEY.

South Boston, July 7.—"I am practicing medicine in South Boston. Last December I removed from 416 to 414 Broadway. I have become a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society."

F. E. CABOT.

Boston, June 9.—"Since date of last report I have continued in the work of insurance inspection, in which I was then engaged, although I have left the service of the Western Manufacturers' Mutual for four years. I am at present in charge of the electrical inspection of the Boston Fire Underwriters' Union. From March, 1888, to March, 1889, I was with the Buffalo Board of Fire Underwriters as chief inspector, leaving them to return to Boston in the employ of the Prudential Fire Insurance Company of Boston.

"October 26, 1886, I was married to Ethel, daughter of Edward and Frances (Cary) Cunningham. We have two children, Ruth, born January 16, 1888, and a girl as yet unnamed, born October 16, 1889."

FRANK O. CARPENTER.

Boston, May 16.—"My home is in Boston, where I have lived since 1886. I am still junior master in the English High School. My department is French. I also practice law so far as I can afternoons and Saturdays. I was admitted to the Suffolk bar in February, 1887, and it is perhaps worthy of record that I was admitted without having had the advantages of either law school or office study, which my school work did not permit.

"I have not thought it wise yet to give up my school and devote myself to law entirely, although I hope it may be possible before many years.

"I was married April 2, 1889, at Boston, Mass., to Miss Flora Edith Wiltse of Corunna, Michigan. She is the daughter of Reuben H. and Lydia P. Wiltse.

"My journeys have been made in the United States, and principally among the mountains. In the summer of 1886, I spent six weeks among the White Mountains, climbing the peaks Pleasant, Monroe, Washington (I spent a week on the summit and in the adjacent ravines), Clay, Jefferson, Adams (camped on the side of Adams), through King's Ravine, Mount Madison and Mount Hayes. Then in one day alone I walked from Gorham to Jackson, over Mounts Surprise, Moriah, the Carter peaks, Carter Dome. In August I climbed the Twin Mountain Range—North Twin, South Twin, Guyot and Bond, the Moat Mountain Range and Mount Kiarsarge in Conway and Mounts Willey, Field, Webster, Jackson and Clinton near the Crawford Notch.

"In 1887, I climbed as usual among the White Mountains, and ascended Mounts Field, Willey, Webster, Carrigain, Pleasant, Monroe and Washington. I explored alone the Benton Range Mountain, Black Mount, Sugar Loaf, Hogback, Blueberry and Owl's Head, spent several days on Moosilauke, with the Appalachian surveying party, explored Mounts Carr and Russell and the ridge south of Flume Mount, which ends in the sharp Osseo Peak, which overlooks North Woodstock, N. H. An accident on a horse car made me temporarily lame and prevented my visiting Mount Katahdin and the Maine mountains in August. I therefore made a trip to the Hudson, Saratoga, Lakes George, Champlain and Ausable Chasm, as a dessert to my summer feast of mountain scenery.

"In 1888, I was not in climbing condition, as the accident of the year before had made me ill all the year, and I spent my summer at Richfield Springs, Watkins' Glen, Niagara Falls, Chicago, sailed from Chicago to Buffalo via Lakes Michigan, Huron and Erie, and camped in the Michigan pine woods.

"In 1889, I went by steamer to Norfolk, Va., and visited the Natural Bridge. Thence I went to Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and vicinity. Then starting from Maryville, Tenn., I went through the Chilhowee Gap to Tuckaleeche Cove — a region dear to the heart of Charles Egbert Craddock. Thence I ascended Thunderhead, traversed part of the Great Smoky Mountains, descended into North Carolina and went to Asheville. I dare say my guide still wonders as he brews his powerful black coffee, and drinks 'hit fer stimilation,' what I was 'down thar fer, over on yon Smoky Mountin,' for mountain climbing for the pleasure of it is an idea his mind could not grasp. From Asheville I went to Michigan, and in visiting and camping the summer came to an end.

"The only office I hold is the exalted one of Justice of the Peace,— 'one of our justices,' appointed June, 1887. I am a life member of the Appalachian Mountain Club, of which I was Counselor of Exploration from January, 1887, to January, 1890, and of the Bostonian Society, Boston Society of Natural History, B. Y. M. C. Union, and First Nationalist Club of Boston.

"I have written some occasional articles not worthy of cataloguing here, save a paper in 'Appalachia,' vol. IV., 1888, entitled 'A Day and Night on the Benton Range,' and one now in the editor's hands for a forthcoming number, 'Thunderhead Peak and the Great Smoky Mountains.'"

IGNATIUS SUMNER CARRUTH.

Died in Boston, Mass., August 8, 1883.

See Report III., pp. 31–32.

HENRY B. CHAPIN.

Boston, April 21.— "Since 1886 I have lived in Boston, Mass. On October 1, 1886, I was appointed Assistant General Freight Agent of the Boston & Albany Railroad Co., and on December 1, 1886, I was appointed General Freight Agent of the same company, which position I now hold.

"I was married at Canton, Mass., on October 12, 1887, to Susan Torrey Revere, daughter of John and Susan Torrey Revere.

"I have one son, John Revere Chapin, born on July 8, 1888."

CHARLES H. CHAPMAN.

Has not been heard from. Was in Buffalo for a time in 1888 in the office of the United States Signal Service Office. Married Miss Agnes Pugsley, March 19, 1885, in Philadelphia.

GEORGE T. CHASE.

New York, May 5.— "Since our last report I have resided in New York City, where I have been practicing medicine.

"I am a member of the Unitarian Club of New York."

HARVEY N. COLLISON.

Boston, April 5.—"Since 1886 I have resided in Boston, and have continued the practice of law, which profession I was first authorized to pursue January 22, 1883.

"I am still a bachelor — of arts.

"I have stayed at home. For dates I might answer, usually between midnight and nine in the morning.

"Since 1886 I have been twice a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, in 1887 and 1888, and in 1888 I was also a member of the Boston School Committee.

"I have been somewhat active in politics on the Democratic side. I helped organize and am the first Vice-President of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, and am Vice-President for Massachusetts, and member of the executive committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs. I have made sundry addresses on political topics in several of the States.

"I am a member of the Reform Club of New York and of the Charitable Irish Society of Boston."

WILLIAM HOFF COOK.

San Francisco, April 9.—"My residence is still in San Francisco, where I am still practicing law. I have one son, James Peirce Cook, born July 10, 1886. I have not been out of California since I returned here in July, 1883."

CHARLES S. DAVIS.

Plymouth, Mass., April 8.—"Since 1886 I have resided in Plymouth, Mass., engaged in the practice of law. I was married June 30, 1886, to Lydia Russell, of said Plymouth, daughter of John I. and Mary D. Russell. I have one child, Charles S. Davis, Jr., born June 30, 1888."

JOHN DOANE.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 22.—"My work continued with the Olivet Chapel Branch of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Cleveland, Ohio, until April, 1888. At that time the chapel was merged into the main church, and I was appointed assistant to Rev. G. R. Leavitt, D. D., the pastor of the church. My work as assistant pastor consisted in superintending the Sunday School, and the work of the young people, and in occasional preaching. After two or three light attacks of pneumonia, from which I did not rally quickly, the doctor ordered me away from the lake climate. In November of last year I came to Grand Island, where after supplying the pulpit for four months I was called to the pastorate of the Congregational Church, and accepted. I rejoice in the work of preaching Christ.

"On September 5, 1886, a son, John Doane, Jr., was born to me. On September 17, 1888, another son, Leroy Cowles Doane, was born."

EDWIN M. DODD.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 9.—"Since our last report I have continued living here in Providence in the employ of Coffin & Clementson, wool brokers, till March first of this year, when I entered the firm, Mr. Clementson retiring. The style of the firm is now Coffin & Dodd.

"I was married in Worcester, Mass., October 12, 1887, to Ellen Louise Tiffany, daughter of Hannah K. and the late P. Dexter Tiffany, of Worcester. We have one son, Edwin Merrick Dodd, Jr., born in Providence, October 31, 1888."

FRANK F. DODGE.

BOSTON, May 20.—Is still living in Woburn and engaged in the leather business in Boston. Reports that the Class Baby is in excellent health.

JONATHAN DWIGHT, JR.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Is engaged in railroad work, but devotes his leisure to the study of ornithology.

Is a member of the Harvard Club, Linnæan Society, American Ornithological Union, New York Academy of Sciences, American Geographical Society, and 7th Regiment N. G. S. N. Y.

Has written a few articles on birds for The Auk.

ARTHUR W. H. EATON.

NEW YORK, May 16.—"From May, 1886, until sometime in July, 1887, I was minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts. I then resigned and went to Europe for three months, spending my time in England, Scotland, and France. After I returned I lived part of the winter in Boston, and then came to New York, where I have since made my home.

"In 1888 I published, through the Putnams, a theological book, 'The Heart of the Creeds'; in 1889, through White & Allen, a book of verses, 'Acadian Legends and Lyrics'; and in 1890, through Frederick A. Stokes, 'Letter Writing, its Ethics and Etiquette.' I have, at present, two new books under way.

"I have written for publication many poems and prose articles, the latter chiefly historical, and have deposited in the library of the New England Historic Genealogical Society several carefully prepared genealogical manuscripts. Some of my poems have gone into notable anthologies like 'Poems of Wild Life,' and 'The Younger Poets of America,' books published in England, and 'Songs and Singers of the Great Dominion,' published in Canada.

"For two years I have taught English Literature in Arthur H. Cutler's Boys' School in this city, my pupils being principally fellows about to enter Harvard. This year I have also done some hard work in English, and have lectured on 'Modern Thought,' 'Aryan Folk Lore,' 'British Ballads,' etc., in two other well known private schools.

"Besides doing literary work, I have continually officiated in Episcopal churches in New York and the towns near, sometimes taking parish work in addition to Sunday duty. In the absence of Rev. Heber Newton, I usually occupy the pulpit of All Souls. At present I am in charge of an important parish on the Hudson.

"I was a member of the St. Botolph Club of Boston for over two years, but when I finally settled in New York I resigned my membership. I am a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society of Boston, and the New York Biographical and Genealogical Society, in the latter of which I hold office."

RALPH N. ELLIS.

NEW YORK, April 5.—"I have nothing new to add to my record for the coming catalogue." In 1886 was practicing law in New York City.

HERBERT H. EUSTIS.

BOSTON, April 5.—"I entered into the employment of the Eastern Electric Cable Company November, 1886, as electrician, and was elected President of the company July, 1889.

"I was treasurer of the Boston Electric Club on its formation in 1887 until the next year. Am also a member of the Electric Club, New York.

"I was appointed on the Wire Gauge Committee of the National Electric Light Association, and was one of three who calculated the 'properties of copper wire as measured by the Metric Gauge,' which was published by the Association."

JAMES D. FESSENDEN.

NEW YORK, April 3.—"Since 1886 I have continued the practice of law in New York as a member of the firm of Harriman & Fessenden.

"Last summer I visited London and Paris. The clubs and associations in which I have a membership are: The Manhattan Club, the Bar Association of New York, the New York Athletic Club and the Larchmont Yacht Club."

JAMES B. FIELD.

LOWELL, MASS., April 18.—"I am still a practicing physician in this city. Since February, 1887, I have been one of the visiting physicians and surgeons to the Lowell Hospital. Since February 6, 1888, I have been chairman of the Lowell Board of Health, receiving at that time an appointment for two years, and this year a reappointment for a similar period. I am a member of the American Public Health Association and of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, of which latter organization I am treasurer.

"The following is a list of published papers:

"'Membranous Enteritis.' Fiske Fund Prize Dissertation, No. XXXVI, Providence, 1887. This paper was awarded a prize of $200 for the best essay on the subject.

"'The Mutual Relations of the Physician and the Pharmacist,' in the Pharmaceutical Era, June, 1888.

"'Transmission of Scarlatina by Disinfected Clothing,'—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, CXVI., 550. (June 9, 1887).

"'Was it Mumps?'—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, CXVII, 479. (November 17, 1887).

"'Dislocation of the Penis and Testicles' and 'Fracture of the Caracoid Process,'— Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, Vol. 122, p. 399. (April 24, 1890).

"The duties of the Board of Health have prevented any further medical writing with the exception of circulars on sanitary matters, monthly bulletins of mortality, and annual reports.

"I have made no addresses unless Emergency lectures, and a paper on House Drainage, read before the district medical society in October, 1886, could be included under that head. June 19, 1890, I read a paper on 'The Disposal of Garbage' before the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health."

CHARLES E. FISH.

Has not been heard from. In 1886 was conducting a private school for boys in Chicopee, Mass. The Exeter News-Letter for June 27, 1890, states that he resigned the principalship of the Chicopee High School to open a private school at Worcester, and that on the 24th of June, 1890, at a meeting of the trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy, held in Boston, he was elected principal of the Academy.

CHARLES C. FOSTER.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., June 24.—"Since my last report I have continued my practice in Cambridge, my office being at No. 5 Riedesel Avenue. Soon after settling here I was appointed Orthopædic Surgeon to the Cambridge Hospital, which office I still hold. I have twice delivered the annual oration before the County Medical Society, choosing as my subjects club-foot and spinal caries; also read a paper on caries of the ankle before the National Orthopædic Association, of which I am a member, last September. In 1887 I was appointed Assistant Surgeon of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry M. V. M., Col. William A. Bancroft; and in 1889, on the resignation of my predecessor, I was promoted to be full surgeon. I am not married, and do not expect to be for the present. My only journey since my return from Europe was in 1888, going westward via Yellowstone Park to the Pacific Ocean, and eastward via the C. P. R. and Montreal."

HAROLD N. FOWLER.

EXETER, N. H., April 22.—"During the college year 1885–'6, I was instructor in Greek at Harvard, the next year instructor in Latin and in Greek Archæology, the next in Greek and in Greek Archæology. In the spring of 1888 I was appointed instructor in Latin in the Phillips Exeter Academy. I have just been appointed Professor of Latin in the same institution.

"I spent the summer of 1887 abroad, for the most part in London and Paris, working in the British Museum and the Louvre. My father died July 30, 1888. For some weeks in the summer of 1889 I taught Greek in the Oswego Summer School of Languages, at Oswego, N. Y. Since the last report I have published: Thucydides, Book V., edited on the basis of Classen's edition, forming part of the College Series of Greek authors, edited under the supervision of John Williams White and Thomas D. Seymour (Ginn & Co., Boston, 1888); Plautus, Menæchmi, edited on the basis of Brix's edition, forming part of the Students' Series of Latin Classics, edited under the supervision of E. M. Pease (Leach, Sherrell & Sanborn, Boston, 1889); The Sources of Seneca de Beneficiis, in the Transactions of the American Philological Association, 1886, vol. xvii.; The Statue of Asklepios at Epidauros, in the American Journal of Archæology, vol. iii., 1887; Plutarch περὶ Εὐθυμίας, in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, vol. i., 1890; and in addition, summaries of periodicals in almost every number of the American Journal of Archæology, besides a few unsigned reviews published in various places."

HENRY G. FRENCH.

BOSTON, April 7.— Since 1886 has severed all business relations with Louisiana. In 1887 and 1888 traveled most of the time and visited Europe, California and the Sandwich Islands.

For the past seven months has been engaged in the Street Railway Advertising business in New England, and is settled there for the next five years.

EUGENE FULLER.

NEW YORK, May 20.—"Since the last report I have been practicing medicine here in New York City, associated with Dr. E. L. Keyes. I have been abroad once since the last report.

"I am a member of the University, Manhattan and Harvard Clubs.

"I have just been married, April 23, 1890, to Margaret Elizabeth McTavish, daughter of the late Duncan A. McTavish, Esq., of New York. I was married in Victoria, British Columbia, the home of my mother-in-law.

"I have written a few medical articles."

FREDERIC GARDINER, JR.

POMFRET, CONN., May 8.—"On June 27, 1887, a son, Frederic Merrick, was born at Sioux Falls, Dak., and on May 5, 1890, a second son, William Henry, at Roseneath, Philadelphia.

"I remained at Sioux Falls until July, 1889, when I resigned, on account of my health, just as I saw the completion of a handsome stone church, and accepted the rectorship of Christ Church in this little summer resort of the Connecticut hills, where I can have rest and time for study. I have declined several calls to other parishes on account of my health, and shall remain here for the present.

"Any honors I have received have been in the ecclesiastical line, and perhaps will not interest the class, but I will mention a few: In 1886 elected Senior Canon of Calvary Cathedral, Sioux Falls; 1886-9 Diocesan Commissioner Church Building Fund; 1886, Delegate to General Convention; 1887-9, Senior Examining Chaplain to South Dakota; 1885-9, Diocesan Commissioner Church Temperance, etc., and ditto White Cross, etc., etc. My only political office was an election as delegate from Sioux Falls to an abortive Constitutional Convention of all Dakota at Huron in 1888.

"I continued to lecture on science at All Saints' School while at Sioux Falls, and to edit the Diocesan paper, but otherwise have done little in writing or teaching."

WILLIAM A. GASTON.

BOSTON, May 5.—"My answer to your bill of complaint is fully covered by a general denial. I have perpetrated none of the misdemeanors of which you inquire, and therefore refuse to answer your interrogatories numbered two, three, four, five, and six. I have resided in Boston continuously since 1886, am in the same business with the same partners as in 1886. My name, I think, you know; it has no title; and my address for the next five years you will see at the top of this sheet."—[Gaston & Whitney, Attorneys and Counselors at Law, Boston.]

JAMES GEDDES, JR.

BOSTON, April 27.—"With the end of the summer term of '86 my connection with Groton School closed. I taught there a variety of branches, with which I was more or less familiar. Old testament history was one of the latter, and I confess that my interpretation of many of the striking events there recorded leaves something to desire.

"I had an idea that I wished to be connected with some large and influential corporation. Dame Fortune could not well have been more propitious, for in three weeks after leaving Groton I was a clerk in the office of the President and Treasurer of the Union Pacific Railway Co. My entrée was signaled by a rise of two points in the stock. I was given, I think, the largest book to wield the company owned. It was made on purpose for entering and locating their new government land grants.

"There were a number of Harvard boys in the office. In fact, I came to regard the place as a kind of training school for graduates. They used to stay there a few months, then take the Western fever and get sent West to Omaha, Denver or to even more distant and retired nooks, where they were lost to sight until becoming famous as practical railroad men.

"Somehow, I couldn't catch the fever; I have always had, I may say, a preference for traveling East instead of West, and so I tried to content myself with the dignity of the position. But where there is dignity attached to a position, everything else should correspond ; if not, the place is something like our unpaid consular posts, where really tout est perdu fors l'honneur.

"Now, as I think of these positions, where one has, of course, no interest whatever in the business, where day in and day out one does literally nothing other than push a pen, modified by adding columns of figures or 'calling off,' their quasi-importance vanishes and they seem unendurable. As one may infer, I began again to feel the desire of turning over, of leaving my gilded cage and with 'unconfinéd wings' to wanton in the air and enjoy such liberty. Any occupation not purely automatical, but where one can at least exercise judgment,— farming or teaching even, seemed superior, and hence a 'higher calling.' Accordingly I tendered my resignation, which was followed by a corresponding fall of two points in the stock.

"I sailed in March, '87, for Europe and spent six months in Paris. Receiving the appointment of instructor in Romance languages at Boston University, I returned in the fall and began my duties, and have there continued them up to date. Summers I have taught at the Oswego Summer School of Languages. I find a vast difference in the amount of satisfaction experienced between trying to instruct youth and students who have reached the years of discretion. I enjoy my work and feel quite settled down to it ; so in future I shall probably have no cause to inflict our indulgent secretary and the class with lucubrations on the vicissitudes of fortune."

[Was appointed Assistant Professor of Romance Languages and Philology of Boston University, July 23, 1890.]

JOSEPH HENRY GEST.

CINCINNATI, May 18.—"When I last reported to you my occupation was farming and stock-raising, and everything seemed to point to a continuance of that. Unexpectedly, however, there came a few months later, in September, 1886, the offer of a clerkship in the Art Museum here, the duties of which were so congenial that even the attractions of the country did not prevent an acceptance. My position now is that of Assistant Director, engaged in the general administration of the Museum and Academy.

"On the 15th of June, 1887, I was married to Lillie Schultze. We have a daughter, born July 12, 1888, named Susannah Bailey Gest. Marriage, and birth of daughter, both took place in Cincinnati."

*SAMUEL C. GILBERT.

Died in Deming, New Mexico, April 3, 1885.

See Report III., pp. 45–47.

The following sonnet from a memorial volume of Guild's letters and verses, published this spring, forms a touching supplement to the brief sketch of Gilbert's life which Guild prepared for our last class report.

S. C. G.

Against the western sky, whose rosy light
Is paling slow, the mountain wall defines
Its purple mass in grand, eternal lines,
While clouds above unfurl their banners bright.
Alas that all the splendor of the sight
Must fade before the dull eye half divines
Its beauty rare, and that these glowing signs
Must vanish in the darkness of the night!
Alas that often with our fellow men
A life whose wealth we but begin to know
Must fade and vanish to our human ken!
Yet must we feel the thrill its glory gives,
And still retain, as from the sunset's glow,
A sense of higher joy that ever lives.

FRANK M. GILLEY.

CHELSEA, MASS., June 7.—Is still teaching in the Chelsea High School. Spent last summer in London and Paris.

J. BRADLEY GILMAN.

CONCORD, N. H., April 15.—"Your awe inspiring summons leads me to write you with the utmost promptness; although I confess that I have had more experience with the kind formerly sent out by our good friend, 'C. J.'

"Since 1886 I have remained in Concord, N. H., as the minister over the Second Congregational (Unitarian) Society. My life has been, so far as my profession is concerned, very quiet, save for the activity caused by the burning of my church edifice and the rebuilding which resulted therefrom.

"In the literary field I have done a little work. I wrote a children's book called 'The Kingdom of Coins,' and it was published by Roberts Bros. Also a boys' book of adventures called 'Kibboo Ganey,' under the nom de plume of Walter Wentworth. Am now writing the sequel to it; both these published by Roberts Bros. Have also written a number of short stories for newspapers and magazines, the Youths' Companion and others.

"I was married September 14, 1886, to Mary R. Foster, daughter of Dwight Foster of Boston."

WILLIAM W. GOOCH.

BOSTON, May 28.—"After three years' study I was admitted to the Suffolk bar, and became a member of the firm of Gooch & Burdett. Some years later this firm was dissolved, and I became a member of the firm of D. W. & W. W. Gooch, in which firm I still continue. I am a member of the Algonquin, Athletic, Roxbury and two or three smaller clubs in Boston."

LOUIS M. GREELEY.

Chicago, April 5.

SUPREME COURT — STATE OF NEW YORK.

FREDERIC ALMY, Plaintiff, vs. HARVARD COLLEGE: CLASS OF 1880, Defendants.	In Chancery.

The several answers of Louis M. Greeley, one of the defendants in the above entitled cause.

This defendant reserving to himself all right of exception to the many errors, uncertainties, impertinences, and other imperfections of said bill of complaint, for answer thereto, saith:

That he hath since the year A.D. 1886, and up to and including the date hereof, resided at and is still residing at 60 Bellevue Place, in the city of Chicago, County of Cook, and State of Illinois: that he is now and for the period of five years last past, hath been engaged in the practice of the law in said city last aforesaid: that on the first day of April, A. D. 1890, he formed a co-partnership with one Alfred L. Baker for the practice of the law, with the firm name and style of Baker & Greeley, that said firm has its office and principal place of business at Room 34, No. 95 Washington Street, in said city of Chicago.

And the said defendant further answering, saith, that he is not and never hath been married: that he hath not or ever had any child or children: that he hath made no journeys in foreign countries since the year A. D. 1886: that he hath held no office or offices, received no degree or degrees, and joined no club or clubs since the date last aforesaid.

That he hath since said date, written divers and sundry articles for publication in various legal books and periodicals, but that the names of said articles are forgotten both by himself and the world: that the name of this defendant is Louis M. Greeley, and that his address for the next five years will be 60 Bellevue Place, Chicago, Illinois.

And this defendant denies all and all manner of unlawful combination, etc.: all which matters and things this defendant is ready and willing to aver, etc.: and prays to be hence dismissed with his reasonable costs and charges in this behalf most unjustly sustained.

GEORGE GRISWOLD.

Has not been heard from since 1883.

*HENRY ELIOT GUILD.

Henry Eliot Guild was the son of Charles Eliot Guild and Mary Lyman Eliot, and was born at Forest Hills, a suburb of Boston, on the 19th of July, 1859. His forefathers for many generations were of New England stock, and among them were two early governors of Massachusetts, three ministers of the Gospel, and at least eight graduates of Harvard College,—members of the Quincy, Eliot, Dudley, Lyman, Pickering, Vaughan and other families. In the direct male line he was descended from John Guild, who came from Scotland, and settled about 1636 at Dedham, where he was one of the original grantees of the town.

Many of the strongest traits of Guild's character are traceable to his Puritan ancestry, and the large number of his relatives living in and near Boston helped to extend his interests and to intensify the warmth of his affections. He was the second child among three sons and two daughters; the home in which his childhood was passed was full of youthful gaiety, and the rural beauty of the neighborhood fostered the boy's love of nature. He went to a school, kept first by a sister of Professor Lane and later by Mrs. Walker, at Jamaica Plain, where he had for companions the children of many pleasant family friends. In 1868 he was sent to the Roxbury Latin School, and was there fitted for college under the wise care and stimulus of Mr. W. C. Collar. As his elder brother was graduating, Guild passed his entrance examinations without condition, and came to Cambridge the next autumn with his neighbor and earliest playmate, Minot. The gentle studious disposition that had marked his boyhood clung to him, even as he became interested in the activities of college life and in those social pleasures for which he had rich opportunity. A cheerful sense of duty made tasks light, and fine abilities and industry soon won for him a good rank in the class. Friends were drawn to him by his sincerity and bright personal charm; they came without effort on his part, and they were never lost. His vacations were usually spent at the sea-shore or in the mountains, and often on yachting trips with his uncle, President Eliot. During the whole four years he occupied 32 Hollis. He received the honor degree at graduation, ranking thirty-eighth in a class of 173 and thus by right gaining membership in the Phi Beta Kappa. He belonged to the Rifle Corps, Institute of 1770, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Bicycle Club, Finance Club, Alpha Delta Phi, and Hasty Pudding.

The growth of his character during these years at Cambridge was one of such steady and natural progress that we hardly discerned its successive stages. The death of his dearly loved brother hastened the change from boy to man, and with entrance into the Law School began his close companionship with Gilbert, which lasted until the latter's death in 1885. They roomed together in 10 and 12 Grays throughout the law course, and the friendship that grew up between them was the source of the deepest pleasure to both; more than this, they were singularly well suited to help and benefit each other. Gilbert's gay spirits, quick energy and enthusiasm, his flashes of insight, and his varied experience of the world on the one hand, with Guild's calmer observation and lucid reasoning, his gentle fancy, his sweet cheerfulness and perseverance on the other, furnished a contrast and balance of qualities from which each gained continually. Differing as they did in a thousand ways they were always united, not only by warm affection, but by intellectual and moral sympathy. The relation between the roommates, already of rare intimacy when they left Cambridge, seemed to grow nearer with their separation, and later with their failing health and thwarted ambitions.

Guild's work at the Law School was faithful and entirely successful. His faculty for detail and his comprehension of principles were both exceptional, and in the Ames Pleading Club he aroused the admiration of his fellow members by the thoroughness of his preparation and the readiness of his arguments. As he told us in our second report, he spent the summer of 1882 abroad. Besides visiting much of the continent of Europe (especially delighting in Venice, for whose treasures his study under Mr. Moore had stimulated a keen interest), he spent several weeks in England, and, with fresh zest gained from the English Law Courts, returned home to the third year at the Law School. At Commencement, 1883, he took his law degree cum laude, and also that of M. A. In the summer he passed some weeks with Gilbert at Milwaukee, and in a trip to other western cities, and in the autumn entered the office of Shattuck & Munroe in Boston. The practical work of life, which he began vigorously and with unclouded prospects, occupied his mind, and perhaps overtasked his physical energy, during the winter, and he was admitted to the Suffolk County Bar in July, 1884.

Some slight ailments that had shown themselves at intervals now gave sign of lung trouble, which was not wholly removed by a restful summer in the country, and which finally led to a journey to Colorado Springs, where he remained the next two winters. In the spring of 1886, however, the curative air and quiet life had so far restored his health that there seemed to be no imprudence in going to Denver and returning to law practice in the office of Edward O. Wolcott, now United States Senator. Here again the admirable quality of his work received the warmest praise, and it was about this time that one of the most eminent lawyers in Boston, writing of him, said that he "was a well read lawyer, competent to make a thorough examination of any question of law, and to master the details of the most complicated case, and he had a rare power of stating his proposition in clear and strong language." An important and difficult appeal was argued and won on his brief in the Supreme Court at Washington.

The unusual heat at Denver that spring and early summer, together with other accidents, forced him to give up work once more just as brilliant success seemed assured. Rather than dwell on his sad return to Colorado Springs, and the long months that followed with their alternations of deceptive gain and gradual decline, on the beautiful patience with which he waited for the end, and the happy calmness of his dying hours, Guild's classmates will prefer to retain unsaddened their remembrance of his joyous life and strength at Cambridge. For more than a year before his death the members of his immediate family were with him together or by turns to surround his life with loving care, and in the course of his long residence at Colorado Springs he attracted many warm friendships. Always fond of books, and especially of the poets, he found in them great solace during the enforced inactivity of his exile, and his taste for poetry, which had barely begun to be productive at Cambridge, now found expression in a series of short poems, all graceful and full of lofty sense and delicate beauty. A collection of these verses has lately been printed.

None that met Guild even casually could fail to be cheered by the brightness of his presence, and touched by the charm of his personality ; while to those that knew him closely, the unselfishness of his character, the strength of his moral purpose, the essential rightness of his whole nature, were a constant benefit while he lived, and are a cherished memory now that he is gone from us. He died at Colorado Springs on the 21st of March, 1888.

ARTHUR HALE.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—"I am still with the Pennsylvania Railroad as Chief Clerk of the Car Record office.

"I was married on July 3, 1889, at Octorara, Maryland, to Camilla Conner, daughter of Philip Lyng Physick and Mary Darch Conner.

"I am a member of the Association of Car Accountants and of the University Club of Philadelphia.

"I have written a few verses and stories for the Century, the Independent and the Look-Out, also an article for the Railway Equipment Guide, and I have just published a song called 'The Yankee Privateer.'"

ARTHUR L. HALL.

Has not been heard from since 1883. Is still teaching.

FREDERIC B. HALL.

CHARLESTOWN, MASS., April 21.—"I have lived since 1886 principally in Charlestown. In July, 1887, became teacher of science in the Berkeley School, Boston, and hope to remain there.

"My only child, Edith Norcross Hall, died July 24, 1886."

WILLIAM DUDLEY HALL.

BOSTON, May 15.—"I am connected with the eye department of the Boston Dispensary and St. Elizabeth's Hospital."

ARTHUR LEE HANSCOM.

SO. ELIOT, ME., April 10.—"Am still living here, with nothing to chronicle that would be of any particular interest to the class."

MITCHELL HARRISON.

PHILADELPHIA, May 19.— Is secretary of the Franklin Sugar Refining Company, Philadelphia. Was in Europe for five months during the winter of 1889-90.

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART.

CAMBRIDGE, May 14.— And now cometh Albert Bushnell Hart, of the County of Middlesex, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who being duly sworn, deposeth and saith :

"At the date of the last report I was an instructor in American History at Harvard College. In the summer of 1886 I was made permanent instructor in history, and on December 27, 1887, I was appointed assistant Professor of History for five years, from September 1, 1887, which position I still hold. The firm with which I am connected is a large and increasing one, having about 200 partners, and endeavoring with incomplete success to employ about 2,000 hands.

"On July 11, 1889, I was married to Mary Hurd Putnam of Manchester, N. H., daughter of the late Mayor Horace Bishop Putnam and Rachel Hurd.

"The Harvard Historical Society has twice made me its President. I am Curator of the Shepard Historical Society of Cambridge, member of the Massachusetts Historical Society and of the National Geographical Society and corresponding member of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin ; and I belong to various general historical and economic organizations. For two years I have been secretary of the Committee on the Regulation of Athletic Sports.

"The life of a busy teacher is not favorable to literary activity. My principal publications have been short articles in periodicals. The Disposition of our Public Lands, Quarterly Journal of Economics, January, 1887. The Biography of a River and Harbor Bill, paper read before the American Historical Association and the American Economic Association, May 24, 1887 ; printed in the Magazine of American History, July, 1887, and also in the Papers of the American Historical Society, vol. iii. History in High and Preparatory Schools, Academy (Syracuse), September–October, 1887. A List of General Readings in the History of the United States, Academy (Syracuse), November, 1887. Report of the Committee appointed to consider the Subject of College Athletics, and to report thereon to the Faculty,— with John Williams White and W. S. Chaplin, Cambridge, 1888. The Rise of American Cities, Quarterly Journal of Economics, January, 1890. Federal Constitution of the Swiss Confederation (Translation), Old South Leaflets, General Series, No. 18, Boston, 1890. Do the People wish Reform, The Forum, March, 1890. Wie Volk und Politiker zur Civil-dienst Reform stehen ; anonymous translation of the above in Belletristische Journal, New York, March 19 and 26, 1890. Harvard College and the First Church in Cambridge ; proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society for March, 1890. Government and Tariff in Canada, Nation, May 1, 1890. The Status of Athletics in American Colleges, Atlantic, 1890.

"I have also edited No. 1 of the Harvard Historical Monographs, The Veto Power, by E. C. Mason, which has just appeared June, 1890 ; and have announced a series of three volumes, to be called the Epochs of American History, of which the first, by R. T. Thwaites, is now in press.

"Historical lectures and addresses I have made before various scientific and historical organizations : the Connecticut Valley Economic Association at Springfield ; the Connecticut Historical Society at Hartford ; an association at Brown University ; in the Old South lecture courses, etc., etc.

"The only experiences interesting to the class would be those connected with the Athletic Committee. Eighty having always been renowned in that field, one member of the class, Bacon, has been made Chairman of the Committee of the Overseers, and two are members of the Athletic Committee, Hooper and Hart. We have been trying here for two years to put Harvard athletics on a more satisfactory footing, by eliminating doubtful practices and by forwarding the increase of grounds and facilities.

"The only foreign countries that I have visited are Chicago and Canada, the latter in April, 1890, whither I went for the sake of seeing the Canadian Government in operation.

"My address is 11 Everett Street, Cambridge, Mass., where all members of the Class of '80 are cordially welcome."

GEORGE B. HATCH.

LYNN, MASS., June 26.—"I came to Lynn, Mass., as Minister of the North Congregational Church, June, 1887, and was ordained in July, of the same year. My life has been busy but without special incident, and I will spare you further details at this late day. I may remain here during the next three years and may not. Perhaps it will be best to leave my permanent address as it is now. Letters directed to Jewett City, Conn., will be forwarded to me.

"Was married May 23, 1887, at Jewett City, Conn., to May Wilson Burleson, daughter of Allen B. and Mary Fanning Burleson of Jewett City. A daughter, May Burleson, was born in Lynn, April 6, 1888."

EDWARD SOUTHWORTH HAWES.

BOSTON, May 23.—"Since 1886 I have been in charge of the department of Greek and Latin in the Cathedral School of Saint Paul, Garden City, L. I. I have not been married, nor traveled in foreign countries, nor been guilty of any similar aberration."

HAROLD G. HENDERSON.

Has not been heard from since 1883. Married.

GEORGE A. HIBBARD.

Has not been heard from. Has contributed many admirable stories to the Century, Scribner's, Harpers' Monthly and Weekly, Lippincott's and other magazines. Several of them were illustrated by the author.

WILLIAM H. HILLS.

Boston, May 13.—"Since 1886 I have resided at Boston Highlands, Winthrop and Somerville. I removed to Somerville in October, 1887, and since then my address has been 37 Laurel Street. In April, 1887, in partnership with Robert Luce, of the class of 1882. I began the publication of The Writer, 'a monthly magazine to interest and help all literary workers.' Mr. Luce remained in partnership with me until September 1, 1888, when he sold out his interest to me, and since that time I have conducted the business alone. In January, 1889, I began the publication of a companion magazine, The Author, and since that time The Writer has been published first and The Author on the fifteenth day of each month. Both magazines are successful. Connected with the business are several departments, of which the most important is The Writer's Literary Bureau, which criticises and revises MSS., and places them, on commission, when desired. The office of The Writer is at 186 Washington St., Room 7, Boston.

"I am still the exchange editor of the Boston Daily Globe, and the special telegraphic correspondent for New England of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the Chicago Daily News, the Philadelphia Press and the New York Morning Journal. I am constantly doing special work for other papers. 'Students' Songs' had reached its 68th thousand at last accounts, but the supplementary book referred to in the last report I have not found time to prepare as yet.

"I have two children,—Ruth Whitten Hills, born January 16, 1887, at Boston Highlands, and Miriam Fosdick Hills, born April 8, 1889, at Somerville.

"I am a member of the Central Club of Somerville, the Newspaper Club of Boston, the Trade Press Club of Boston, and some other organizations."

FLETCHER S. HINES.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 13.—"I have nothing to report since the last Class report but the birth of a son, Dauphins, born October 8, 1886."

[His wife died in Indianapolis August 18, 1890.]

CHARLES A. HOBBS.

BELMONT, MASS., April 15.—"I am now connected with the Belmont School as Master of Mathematics. This school was established last year by B. F. Harding (Harvard, '78), and has met with phenomenal success. We have been at work but little over six months, and already have twenty-one pupils. We shall have a new building for next year, and our intention is to make the school as good as the best. We are but three miles from Harvard, and I should be happy to have any of the members of the class of '80 call and see us.

"Last September I had published by A. Lovell & Co. of New York, 'An Arithmetic for Preparatory Schools, High Schools, and Academies.' The preparation of this book occupied the greater part of my spare time for about three years, and it has so far met with better success than I anticipated.

"In the early part of 1888 I made my début in the lecture field. I delivered a course of ten lectures on electricity in the Academy building at Wilkes-Barre, and also two lectures on the same subject at White Haven. The lectures, or familiar talks, were well attended, much to my gratification."

WILLIAM HOOPER.

BOSTON, April 7.—"March 8, 1886, I became treasurer of the Fiskdale Mills, which position I held till February 4, 1887, when my resignation was accepted. On August 16, 1886, I was elected temporary treasurer of the Atlantic Cotton Mills, and was made treasurer at the annual meeting of the stockholders on January 10, 1887. This position I still hold."

JOHN W. HOUSTON.

NEW YORK, May 19.—"I have resided in New York City since 1886; was admitted to the bar in June 1887, and was in the office of Carter, Hornblower & Byrne until January 1, 1887, when I became a member of the firm of Carter, Hughes & Cravath, 120 Broadway, New York, which is my present firm. I am unmarried, have made no journeys in foreign countries, and have received no degrees since I left the Harvard Law School in June, 1886, when I received the degrees of LL. B. and A. M. I am a member of the Bar Association of the City of New York, the New York Southern Society, the Young Men's Democratic Club, and the Medico Legal Society. My activity is confined almost wholly to my law work, which is chiefly in the field of corporation law."

JAMES T. HOWE.

Has not been heard from since 1883. Married Mary Cleves Talbott, about 1884. Has a son, Talbott Howe.

*FRANK C. HUIDEKOPER.

Frank Colhoon Huidekoper, son of Edgar and Frances (Shippen) Huidekoper, was born on the 22d day of August, 1857, in Meadville, Pennsylvania.

Harm Jan Huidekoper, who came from Holland to the United States in 1804 and married here Rebecca Colhoon of Carlisle, Pa., was the founder of a large family connection in this country. His son, Edgar, married Frances Shippen of Huntington, Pa., and their youngest child was our classmate.

Frank Huidekoper's boyhood was spent in Meadville. He went to Europe with his mother and sisters in 1870, and traveled extensively but took no regular course of study. On his return he entered Mr. Knapp's school at Plymouth, Mass. Thence he went in 1873 to Phillips' Exeter Academy to prepare for Harvard, where four of his brothers had already been educated. The friendships formed at the preparatory school are often closer than even those formed at college. The contact between classmates is more perfect. Among this Exeter Class of '76, Huidekoper found many of the friends with whom he was most intimate through college and through life. His was an affectionate nature, impulsive and full of nerve power and energy. He won and kept the affection of those whom he sought with the same frank earnestness and sincerity that marked him in all things else.

The natural bent of his mind was toward mathematics and mechanics. While in college his choice of a profession lay between the civil engineer and the architect, and several of his elective courses were in the scientific school. His recreation was found in out-door exercise and mechanical works rather than through societies or clubs. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding. While his physique was equal to almost any tax upon it by prolonged exertion, he took small part in regular athletics, beyond a few walking matches.

The summer after graduation he spent in Europe, and entered in the fall the works of the Brush Electric Light Company in New York, to acquire a practical knowledge of electrical engineering. The next summer he joined an engineering party in locating a new railroad in Washington County, Virginia. There he also undertook some enterprises on his own account.

June 13, 1882, he married Miss Caroline C. Foster, daughter of Calvin Foster of Worcester, Mass. The next June found him in Paris studying architecture at the École des Beaux Arts, where he remained hard at work, till December, 1884, with the exception of a summer vacation passed in Holland and Belgium. Early in 1885 he returned to Worcester, and opened an office there with Ambrose S. Russell, one of his fellow students in the Paris school, under the firm name of Russell & Huidekoper, architects. Afterward, his partner going West, he removed to New York and continued his work there.

He established his summer home at York Harbor, Maine, and the next winter lived in Yonkers, near New York City. In the early part of 1888 he made a trip to Dutch Guiana. There he contracted the fever which hastened his death. He returned seriously ill, and, as soon as his health permitted, sought occupation in farming at Dover, Mass. During the winter of 1889–90 he had recurring attacks of the fever, and in June last developed a disease of the brain that required hospital treatment. He died at the Butler Hospital, Providence, R. I., July 26, 1890. He leaves surviving, his wife and three children, Herman John, born July 20, 1883, Rosalind, born May 29, 1885, and Prescott Foster, born January 31, 1887.

Those of the class who knew Frank Huidekoper even slightly will remember his frank address and his earnestness in all that he undertook. To him deception was impossible, and he was slow to recognize it in others. To those whom he trusted he opened his heart without concealment. Without the conscious balancing of right against wrong, a certain native nobility made him incapable of a mean or selfish act. The unconscious directness and frankness of his nature, his mind unsullied by craft or deceit, endeared him to those he trusted more than could any subtlety of intellect. In the possession of these qualities the man remained the Exeter boy to the end.

ARTHUR HURST.

NEW YORK, April 4.—"Since the last section of my autobiography I have been living a more or less quiet, contented and virtuous existence. At no time during this period have I found life not worth the living, but on the contrary can look back over it with the sweet satisfaction of finding it full of dear friendships, good fellowship and pleasant memories. I still continue the practice of the law and if I do not find it largely profitable, yet I have the serene comfort of knowing that I would not change it for any other profession or business for double the emolument. I am not yet married, and am waiting for the dear dame that shall convince me that 'marriage is not a failure.' My particular 'fad' is canoe cruising and camping. I am a member of the American Canoe Association, the Marine and Field Club at Bath Beach, L. I., (a Country Club); the Oxford Club, Franklin Literary Society, 'Clover' Banjo Club, and several other similar organizations, all of Brooklyn, N. Y. My health was never better. I have not made any long journeys, and have not received any distinguished honors or offices."

HENRY JACKSON.

BOSTON, April 5.—"Since 1886 I have been practicing medicine in Boston. October 20, 1887, I married Lucy W., daughter of A. W. and Geo. W. Rise, of Boston. My daughter, Adelaide, was born July 15, 1888. My literary labors have been confined to a few articles published in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal."

L. H. H. JOHNSON.

BOSTON, April 10.—"The last four years I have spent quietly in the practice of law in Boston. My residence during this time has been in Braintree. I have not been married, nor have I made any journeys worthy of description. The offices held by me have been of a local nature only, and the clubs and societies of which I am a member are of the same description."

HENRY CHAMPION JONES.

Boston, April 18.—"I am still, as I was at the time of the last class report, a Junior Master in the Boston Latin School. I am a member of the St. Botolph and Union Boat Clubs, and of the Massachusetts Tariff Reform League."

FREDERICK D. JORDAN.

Has not been heard from since graduation. I have had no address that would reach him for over seven years.

FRANCIS B. KEENE.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 23.—"At the time of my last letter, June 7, 1886, I was the representative here of Coxe Bros. & Co., miners and shippers of Lehigh coal. Up to February 1, 1887, I was busily engaged in looking after their large and growing interests in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakota, and part of Iowa—a large territory. My business took me into all parts of this great territory in all seasons of the year, and my journeys were not without adventure and rough experiences. Life in the newly developed prairie towns of 'the wooley West' is not pleasing, and, as I think I have remarked before, the further west one goes the more convinced one becomes that the wise men did really come from the East.*

"On February 1, 1887, I gave up my position, and being much worn out with overwork and anxiety I decided to go to Europe for a few months. On February 26, 1887, I sailed from New York by the Cunard steamer 'Etruria' with a few Milwaukee friends. If I had not already thrown up my agency, it might, during the next few days, have been in danger of going with the rest. After reaching England I spent a week in London and then went to Paris, where I passed some time with friends from home. About the middle of April I left for Scotland, where I was for a fortnight the guest of friends at a charming country place north of Aberdeen. An abundance of simple country fare, long hours of undisturbed sleep, several hours each day in the saddle, long tramps with gun and dogs over the stony braes, and tennis each day, rain or shine, began at once to build up my tired mind and body, and if a sudden bereavement in the family of my host had not brought my visit to an abrupt end I should, no doubt, have become as brawny as any Scot in the shire. I returned immediately to London, where, with the exception of two short visits to north Devonshire and north Somerset, where my ancestors flourished as far back as the time when St. Dunstan pulled the Devil by the nose, I remained until August, during one of the most brilliant seasons the great city has ever known. Those who were in London during the Jubilee season will never forget the series of imposing ceremonies, the unusual number of fine entertainments, and the brilliant gathering of royalty and rank from all parts of the world. To go out to Hyde Park of an afternoon and see half a dozen kings, a queen or two, and princes and potentates galore, was an every-day occurrence, and became at last so commonplace that one would hardly have taken the trouble to go around the corner to see the Grand Mogul himself. The weather was continuously fine, and the heat was seldom oppressive. It was a memorable summer. About the 1st of August I again went up to Aberdeenshire and spent another fortnight with my friends. I had planned a journey to Switzerland, but was obliged to abandon it for lack of time. On September 1st I left Southampton for New York on the North-German Lloyd steamer 'Ems,' with a large party of Milwaukeeans.

* The wise men went West, however.—F.A.

"After reaching home I was not engaged in regular occupation until February 1, 1889, when I began newspaper work as the dramatic editor of the Sentinel in Milwaukee. Soon afterwards I took hold of the literary department. In July of the same year I was persuaded to accept the position of business manager of the Luening Conservatory of Music, a young but growing institution, which has since been established in a large and handsome building. With twelve instructors and between two and three hundred pupils the institution is considered a very vigorous infant. Owing to the rapid growth of the Conservatory and the increase of my cares, I was obliged to give up my literary editorship, though I still retain my dramatic editorship. During the coming summer I expect to make a combined business and pleasure trip to England, and shall go to Ober Ammergau to see the Passion Play.

"I am still unmarried. Am a member of the Milwaukee Club, the Milwaukee Press Club, and various minor clubs."

GEORGE R. KELLY.

BOSTON, April 5.—"Since 1883 (October 8) I have resided in Boston and since December 1, 1885, have been in the business of importing window, picture and plate glass and jobbing the American produce in the same line at 79, 81 and 83 Portland Street, Boston. January 1, 1887, the firm of Wise, Rowan & Kelly dissolved, Mr. Wise retiring and Mr. Rowan and myself continuing the business under the firm name of Rowan & Kelly until November 23, 1889, when Mr. Rowan retired and I took the business alone, using the firm name of Geo. R. Kelly & Co.

"This constitutes the uneventful life of the undersigned in the struggle for the 'Mighty Dollar.'"

T. D. KENNESON.

NEW YORK, May 20.—"I have resided in the city of New York since 1886, and have been engaged in the practice of law. I was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1884 in the city of New York. At present I am a member of the firm of Kenneson, Crain & Alling, 35 Wall Street, New York City."

PERCY KENT.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Is still engaged in business as a "Manufacturer of burlap, cotton and paper bags" in New York City.

HENRY W. KILBURN.

Has not been heard from since 1885. Is practicing medicine in Boston. Was ophthalmic surgeon to the Lowell Hospital from April, 1887, to April, 1889, and is now assistant to the ophthalmic surgeons of the Boston City Hospital.

Married Harriet Mason Plumer, daughter of Mrs. Avery Plumer, April 24, 1889, at the Old South Church, Boston.

JOHN L. LAMSON.

New York, April 4.—"My residence since 1886 has been in New York City. In May, 1889, the New York Security and Trust Company was organized and I was made secretary, which position I still occupy. I am not as yet married but ere autumn turns its leaves I hope to be a Benedict. My travels have consisted of several trips to Coney Island and back."

ARTHUR H. LEA.

Philadelphia, April 4.—Is still a member of the firm of Lea Brothers & Co., Publishers, Philadelphia.

WILLIAM P. LEARNED.

New York, April 14.—"My residence still is at Pittsfield, Mass. Since 1886 I have been engaged at home settling up my father's estate. Last December I entered the Accident Department of this company. [The Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York]."

JAMES L. LESTER.

Has not been heard from since 1883, when he was teaching in Cincinnati.

EDWARD H. LUM.

Chatham, N. J., May 20.—"Since the last report I have resided in Philadelphia until a year ago, when I gave up business to recruit my health. I have been rusticating for a year and am now practically as well as ever I was. As already reported, I was with the mercantile agency of R. G. Dun & Co. I am about to go into another line of business, but as my plans are not settled, I prefer to pass over the subject here.

"I have a son named Merritt Bruen Lum, born March 5, 1887, at 807 Windsor Square, Philadelphia.

"Last summer I spent in New England and New Brunswick, combining pleasure with profit to my health.

"I have become a member of the Philadelphia Shakespeare Society, but have done nothing else to speak of outside of my business."

*CHARLES DUDLEY MARCH.

Charles Dudley March, elder son of John Fyne March and Mary Lowndes, was born on his grandfather's place at Newport, Rhode Island, September 23, 1857, and passed much of his boyhood at Staatsburgh-on-Hudson. He came of an old New Hampshire family, with connections closely identified in blood and association with the founders of the Republic and the moulders of the polity of New York State. Even as a little boy, the literary and artistic bent of his later life was manifest. He was fonder of reading and study than of the games and exercises usual to those of his years, and quickly showed the leaning toward the classics and modern languages, which was destined to lead him to honorable scholarship. His elders bear witness that from an early age he was a delightful companion. His alert and brilliant faculties, his sense of honor, his apt and keen expression, caused his phrases and sayings to be remembered. He had from a child a bright and cheerful temperament, and that finesse of eighteenth-century France which we all enjoy, but very rarely find.

He studied for a time at St. Paul's School, Concord, but prepared himself for college chiefly at home, enjoying the aid of very able teachers. He entered without condition, and held high rank throughout his course, taking second-year honors in classics, and receiving at graduation honorable mention in Latin and in English Composition. His Commencement disquisition, in verse, on "Rome and Juvenal," which, at the request of some of the class, is printed as a memorial of him in an appendix to this report, was unusual in both form and substance, and excited much attention when it was delivered in Sander's Theatre. It is full of promise of future literary achievement; and it is worth noting that it was written at home, entirely without reference-books, during a few days when March was kept away from Cambridge by illness.

While at college March was a popular member of several of the social societies, and was especially happy in the dramatic representations of the time, in which he played important rôles.

The career which March had chosen, and to which all his studies and plans tended, was that of a professorship of belles-lettres. Of this he consistently took a very serious view, striving to make himself in every way a complete master of all the subjects embraced by this most catholic branch of knowledge, and to fit himself so perfectly that he could be in the highest sense useful to those who might come to him for guidance. It was a noble ambition.

During his college days, already, his exact and wide knowledge of modern languages and of the literature of all ages would have been remarkable in a much older man. After graduation he spent most of his time in Europe, seeking to re-establish his health, which had been impaired probably by overwork during his preparation for college, when he did, and did thoroughly, in one year, the work of two. But, above all, he never lost sight of his professional aim, and sought constantly to perfect his colloquial knowledge of the languages, and to broaden his intellectual view by changing his standpoint to that of different peoples. He spent many months separated from his old friends, but everywhere winning new and attached ones, in private families in Dresden, in Florence, and in Madrid; and his linguistic aptitude was so great that in conversation with Frenchmen, or Germans, or Italians, or Spaniards, he was invariably taken for a compatriot. He was captivated by the delicate spell which the loveliness of Mediterranean lands weaves alike about natives and strangers, two places of his especial predilection being Sicilian Taormina with its grandiose perspective of Etna and the Ionian Sea, and quaint, historic Amalfi with its vine-trellised galleries overlooking the blue bosom of the Gulf of Salerno. At Amalfi March had for a time a house of his own, with the joy to which he was peculiarly sensitive of bringing his own home-treasures about him once more; and it was here that he passed through a bitter experience in the temporary failure of his eyesight. For long he was forbidden to read or write a line. He underwent this trial cheerfully, aided by friendly neighbors among priests, peasants, and gentlefolk. A side-light is thrown on the completeness of his mastery of Italian, extending even to the local dialects, by his having given instruction during this time, of course without book, to a class of peasant children. While his eyesight grew stronger, from this on it always troubled him.

He died suddenly and alone, in Paris, on December 24, 1887, at the age of a little more than thirty.

It was written of him by one of his Harvard instructors whose opinion is of the highest authority: "I take part in the sorrow for his death. . . . . I retained for him a strong regard, and I had hoped that our acquaintance might at some time be renewed. He was of a sort that America needs, and can ill spare."

His college companions will cherish their memory of him as he delighted to receive them, in the atmosphere of refinement and culture of his rooms at the corner of Brattle and Story streets, amid his pretty china and choice engravings, and above all in the genial companionship of his books, which have now gone by his will to the Harvard Library,— embracing his favorite English classics in the princeps editions, clothed in the substantial and artistic bindings which he designed so well, and the choicest specimens of presswork and illustration of the modern French art-typographer. The hours passed there, often diversified by music, for March played with rare taste and feeling the piano, will always be to those who shared in them among the happiest of their fe at Cambridge. To Harvard men, and to us of his class, in particular, Charles larch's death comes home with especial force as the cancellation of an unusually fair romise of a fruitful and honorable life. T. W. L.

LYNN, MASS., April 5.—"Since 1886 I have been principal of tl High School at Lynn. I fear there is nothing else of any special inte est in my career. My address to-day is Lynn. A school-master nev gives his address for five years ahead."

LEONARD E. OPDYCKE.

NEW YORK, April 13.—"In the spring of '86 I visited Sicil passed the summer in Switzerland, the autumn in Germany, and th winter partly at Vienna and partly at Venice and on the Nile. I ha also a month in Athens, and a delightful springtime journey northwar through Italy, followed by a pause at Paris, a second visit to German and a short trip through the south of England, before returning hom in July, '87. The next two years I spent in literary work, which, whi of little profit and of no general interest, was very pleasant and too me to Holland for the summer of '88. Since June, '89, I have bee busy at law in New York City, and expect to continue so.

"I have become a member of the Reform and the City Refor Clubs; the Association of the Bar; the New York Historical and th Cremation Societies, and of the Archæological Institute."

CHARLES A. PARKER.

BOSTON, May 20.—"I still reside in Boston, but at present am nc in business. I have not been married since last report, nor have I an such intentions at present."

GEORGE PELLEW.

BERMUDA, April 17.—"In the autumn of 1886 I left Canton afte an unsuccessful attempt to practice law in partnership with an aspi ing young politician The abundant leisure I devoted to readin ilosophy and to the composition of an elaborate and comprehensive rk in elaboration of Clifford's 'Mind Stuff' theory, the MSS. of ich still lies in a forgotten corner of a deserted country house. That nter and the following spring I was engaged by Josiah Quincy to lp him in draughting the numerous bills that, as a labor candidate d reformer, he was constantly introducing into the Massachusetts egislature.

"In June I went abroad with the notion of obtaining light on hat we know as the Irish Question. From New York and London tters were obtained that made friends for me among both Unionists d Nationalists. I spent some five months in Ireland — five most teresting and happy months — and returned in November with many ackthorn sticks and note books galore. The spring of 1888 I spent Boston preparing these notes for publication in book form, the ewspapers not caring for such unpartisan material. In February a ociety in Boston had a pamphlet that I had written some time before ublished by Houghton & Mifflin. It was an argument on unsentimental cientific grounds for woman suffrage, or rather for the passage of a unicipal Woman Suffrage Bill that was then pending in the Legislature, nder the title 'Woman and the Commonwealth, a Question of Expedincy.' In June a selection from my Irish notes was published by G. . Putnam's Sons of New York, 'In Castle and Cabin; or, Talks in reland in 1887.'*

"In the summer an article by me appeared in the Forum for July, The New Battle of the Books,' in which I tried to state the argument n behalf of Realism in literature against Romanticism with the least ossible offence to the sensitive feelings of the Romanticists.

"In the autumn I settled in New York in the hope (soon disapointed) of getting some active position in a law office. Several months were spent in this endeavor, during which I was admitted to the New York bar on motion. In the spring of 1889 I made my first attempt at journalism by undertaking the New York correspondence of the Boston Transcript, a position I reluctantly gave up in the autumn, in consequence of ill health. About the same time I also undertook the life of John Jay, the Chief Justice, for the American Statesman Series, a kind of writing in which I was quite inexperienced. The MSS. was completed in a fashion this spring of 1890, and so soon as it had been sent off to the editor in Boston I embarked by my doctor's advice for Bermuda.

"University Club, New York, will be my address for the future as in the past."

J. L. PENNYPACKER.

GREAT FALLS, N. H., May 10.—"My home is still in Haddonfield, New Jersey. My business, the Philadelphia agency of Taintor Brothers & Co., New York, Publishers. Since the last report two children have been added to my family — Joseph Waitaker Pennypacker, born at Haddonfield, N. J., October 2, 1887, and Edward Lane Pennypacker, born at Haddonfield, N. J., September 12, 1889. My only foreign journeys have been daily trips to New Jersey, and my chief commercial activities have been directed to the discounting and, at last, to the settlement of household bills."

ARTHUR PERRY.

WESTERLY, R. I., May 10.—"The Washington National Bank has been under the management of the Perry family since 1806, and you will not be surprised to find me still assistant cashier in that institution. While banking is my business I have been interested in other enterprises, and in 1887, in company with other gentlemen, started the Westerly Electric Light Co., acting as its secretary and treasurer until May, 1889. The plant was then sold to the Westerly Gas and Electric Light Co., and I am now secretary and treasurer of that corporation.

I am also a charter member of the Westerly Water Works, and one of its board of directors. For the last five years I have been a member of the town school committee, and am at present its chairman.

"I have been somewhat active in state politics, though never a candidate for office. Have made a few addresses upon political and moral questions. I am not quite as ready to prophesy results as I was in 1886, though the experiments of Prohibition and high licence in Rhode Island have strengthened my conviction that constitutional Prohibition is the only effectual restriction upon the liquor saloon.

"I have grown gray and, — handsome, — and have two boys in school who will soon know more than their father. If you don't believe it come and see. Our latch-string is always out for members of the class of '80."

GEORGE M. PERRY.

NEW YORK, May 6.— "I am still at the Astor Library, and am now engaged in the regular work of the catalogue department. I am at present a member of the Harvard Club of this city, and am doing some work on the library as I have opportunity."

HERBERT M. PERRY.

NEW YORK, June 16. — Toward the end of his second year as a Fellow of Johns Hopkins University, was obliged to succumb to a serious form of dyspepsia. Is now in New York under medical treatment.

WILLIAM A. PEW.

Has not been heard from since 1883. One classmate writes that he lives in Salem but has a law office in Gloucester, and that he married Alice Huntington of Cambridge, Mass.; another that his appointment as collector of customs for the Gloucester District, Mass., was confirmed by the Senate June 17, 1890; and a third that he is captain of the Gloucester company of the state militia.

ERNEST H. PILSBURY.

New York, June 13.—"Since 1886, I have been engaged in the practice of the law. I was admitted to the New York bar in May, 1883. In May, 1888, I formed the partnership of Wray & Pilsbury, which firm has since that time had its offices at 237 Broadway, New York City. My residence is 113 Cambridge Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. I am not, and have no vested or contingent expectation of being married."

WESLEY FRANK PRICE.

Santa Ana, California, April 23.—"In October, 1885, I was ordained to the gospel ministry by an Ecclesiastical Council convened for that purpose in the Madison Avenue Congregational Church in the city of New York. At the same time and by the same Ecclesiastical Council, convened as stated, I was installed pastor of the Madison Avenue Congregational Church. In July, 1888, I resigned the pastorate of my church in New York and came to California. My first year in California I spent in the beautiful city of San José as pastoral supply of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. C. Minton, on a tour of the world. After Mr. Minton's return I received and accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Ana, California. Here I am now, and here I hope to be till I die.

"I send kindest greeting to all my classmates, and can wish them nothing better than that they all may yet have a home in Southern California, for this is indeed the Paradise of the world."

JOSIAH QUINCY.

Boston, June 30.—"Has been chiefly occupied with politics since last report. Served a second term as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1888, being on Committees on Labor and on Rules. Was chairman of the Executive Committee of Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, 1888–9; Democratic candidate for Congress from second district of Massachusetts in 1888; member of Democratic State Committee in 1889 and chosen its secretary in 1890; served a third term in Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1890, being on Committees on Taxation, Election Laws and Rules and on Elevated Railroad Investigating Committee."

FREDERICK J. RANLETT.

Boston, April 15.—"Upon receipt of your circular my first thought was to simply send you my address, and keep silence as to further autobiographical details. Indeed, I have such scanty material wherewith to be my own Boswell that, were it not for your threat of introducing 'hearsay information,' I should be quite willing to be embalmed in the report as one who 'has not been heard from.' The expression suggests just enough of romance and mystery to be a pleasing substitute for a record which is, in fact, entirely common-place.

"When I tell you that since our last report I have not been wise, or foolish, enough even to change my occupation or my residence you will see, at once, that most of your interrogatories must necessarily be irrelevant.

"At graduation I saw myself in prophetic vision, like the Rev. Homer Wilbur, the prospective possessor of many titles in the Quinquennial Catalogue, but the Quinquennial of 1890 will undoubtedly show that I am still as destitute of honors as the Indian with the long name, who graduated in 1665. My sole hope of academic distinction now is that I may, by diligence, attain the dignity of being the 'oldest living graduate,' an ambition which I feel may possibly be gratified, provided, only, that —— I live long enough. I hesitate to disclose even this ambition for it has a kind of selfish look about it that I don't half like.

"My attempts at authorship have been very modest, though I did, at one time, write a good many short articles upon legal and antiquarian subjects for the Boston press. The one most appropriately mentioned here would be 'Harvard in 1764.'

"I was, for a short time, a member of the Common Council of Newton, and am now in the Massachusetts House of Representatives."

WALTER H. RHETT.

ATLANTA, GA., May 20.—"Am still practicing law in Atlanta. Was married June 6, 1888, to Annie Raymond Reid, daughter of Dr. Robert and Ophelia Caldwell Reid, of Atlanta, Ga.

Is President of the South Carolina Society of Atlanta, Ga., and a member of the Capital City Club.

WILLIAM K. RICHARDSON.

BOSTON, April 20.—"I passed the summer of 1887 in England. In the autumn I began to practice law in partnership with John T. Wheelwright. I became a partner of T. L. Livermore and Frederick P. Fish in the spring of 1889, and have continued since that time to practice my profession at 40 Water Street, Boston.

"My only degrees are these: B. A., Oxford, 1884; A. M., Harvard, 1886."

*FRANK B. ROLLINS.

Died in La Grange, Mo., February 4, 1884.

See report III, pp. 68-69.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—"In the fall of 1886 I ran for mayor of New York on the Citizens' and Republican ticket, against Henry George, the labor candidate, and Abraham S. Hewitt, the nominee of the united Democracy, who was elected. In the presidental campaign of 1888, I was on the stump for the Republican ticket. On May 10, 1889, I was appointed United States Civil Service Commissioner, and for the past year have been up to my ears in one unending fight to take and keep the civil service out of the hands of the politicians; and I may say without question that during this year the law has been observed in the classified service under our charge more rigidly and impartially than ever before.

"In 1886 I wrote the 'Life of Thomas Hart Benton,' in the American Statesman Series, and in 1887 the 'Life of Gouverneur Morris,' for the same series.* In 1888 I published my 'Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail,' and in 1889 the first two volumes of 'The Winning of the West.' Have contributed a number of political essays and sketches of sport to the Century, St. Nicholas, Murray's Magazine (London), etc.

"Made a trip through Europe in the winter of 1886-7. I spend a couple of months on my ranch or hunting in the Rockies each year, and the rest of my time on my place at Sagamore Hill, except for a winter visit to New York. This year I have been obliged by my official duties to live most of the time in Washington."

EUGENE DEXTER RUSSELL.

WALTHAM, MASS., April 12.—"I left Bradford September, 1886, to take the Wakefield High School. After two successful years here I took another step upward, and am now principal of the Waltham High School.

"At Wakefield Katherine was born June 18, 1887, and Marguerite joined in the procession June 1, 1889, at Waltham."

* Roosevelt missed an opportunity for a little fun with Yale by not printing in his life of Morris the following extract from the will of Lewis Morris, 3d, dated November 19, 1760, and recorded in the New York Surrogate's office, Liber 23, page 426:

"It is my desire that my son Gouverneur Morris may have the best education that is to be had in England or America, but my express will and directions are, that he be never sent for that purpose to the Colony of Connecticut, least he sh'd imbibe in his youth that low craft and cunning, so incident to the people of that country, which is so interwoven in their Constitutions that all their art cannot disguise it from the world, tho' many of them, under the sanctifyed Garb of Religion have endeavored to impose themselves on the world for honest men."

The 'Diary and Letters of Gouverneur Morris,' (Scribners: 1888) gives the opening words, but stops at the word 'America.'—F. A.

RICHARD M. SALTONSTALL.

Boston, April 5.—"Since 1886 I have resided as before, at Chestnut Hill, Mass. In 1887 I was appointed General Solicitor of the New York & New England Railroad Company, and continued to act in that capacity until February, 1890. I am now engaged in the general practice of the law in Boston.

"At the meeting of the Alumni Association of Harvard College in June, 1888, I was elected a member of the committee to nominate overseers, and have since acted as a member of this committee."

CHESTER F. SANGER.

Boston, April 8.—"In my last report I mentioned incidentally that I had taken considerable interest in Cambridge politics; this interest increased rather than diminished, and in 1887 I was a member of the Common Council from Ward 5. The following year, and again in 1889, I was a member of our House of Representatives from the district comprising Wards 1 and 5 of Cambridge. Those two years, because of the experience gained and friendships formed, I count as the pleasantest in my life. The first year I was house chairman of the Library Committee and a member of the Committee on Probate and Insolvency; the second year I was house chairman of the Committee on Drainage, which after a long and somewhat bitter contest put through a bill under which the sewage of a district containing nearly one-sixth of the population of our State is to be disposed of by a metropolitan system of sewerage at an estimated cost of construction of $5,000,000. In 1888 there were three members of '80 in the House —Quincy, Collison and myself.

"While I entered political life with the intention of remaining there but a few years at the most, the end came at a time and in a manner little anticipated by me. In October, 1889, while in the contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination in Cambridge, I was surprised by an offer from Gov. Ames of appointment as Justice of the Third District Court of Eastern Middlesex, having jurisdiction of Cambridge, Belmont and Arlington, or about 80,000 people, and the third in size and importance in the State. As judges are appointed for life in Massachusetts, and as this particular judgeship had a good salary attached, I naturally accepted the wholly unsolicited honor. In due time I was nominated, confirmed unanimously by the Council, and October 24, 1889, took my seat upon the bench.

"The Court duties occupy about one half my time daily; the remaining half I am at liberty to devote to such private office business as comes to me. I have now become entirely accustomed to this new position and find it a thoroughly congenial one.

"Besides attending to law and politics I have found time to do some journalistic work since 1886, have been West several times and am glad to say that I have made the acquaintance of several members of '80."

HENRY W. SAVAGE.

BOSTON, MASS., June 14.—"Since 1886 I have resided in Boston and continued in the same business, real estate, now under my own name. I am also interested to a considerable extent in building. On October 24, 1889, at East Marshfield, Mass., I was married to Alice Louise Batcheler, daughter of Edwin H. and Elizabeth H. Batcheler."

WILLIAM B. SHARP.

Has not been heard from since graduation. Is practicing law in San Francisco.

HENRY R. SHAW.

PARIS, May 5.—Was married at Lenox, Mass., September 20, 1883, to Grace Lenox Rathbone. Is still living abroad.

S. W. SKINNER.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, June 17.—"Since 1886 I have been connected with the Cincinnati Ice Machine Company as its secretary. In November, 1886, I was married to Elizabeth Johnston, daughter of Jane Tibbats and the late George W. Jones of this city."

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Boston, April 18.—Is still a partner in the firm of Thomas L. Smith & Sons, wholesale liquor dealers, Boston.

*WALTER A. SMITH.

Died in London, England, April 8, 1882. See Report II., pages 73–77.

WILLIAM STANFORD STEVENS.

Boston, April 13.—"In 1887 gave up the practice of medicine, and devoted my spare time to various charitable organizations, in the capacity of treasurer, among them the Mercantile Library Association, the Marine Biological Laboratory, and the Massachusetts Emergency & Hygiene Association, from all of which positions I resigned in December last.

"For two years, 1888 and '89, was a member of the Boston Common Council, Chairman of the Republican Committee of Ward 18, and Vice-President of the Republican Ward and City Committee.

"At present am not in active business; am not married; still maintain my residence at 7 East Newton Street, Boston, and office at 53 Devonshire Street. Have made trips to California, Europe, and Florida, but have not met with any interesting adventures. Am a member of the Union, Algonquin and Athletic Clubs of Boston, and the Harvard Club of New York."

VAN DER LYNN STOW.

San Francisco, April 12.—Is still with the firm of Thomas Day & Co., gas and electric light fixtures, San Francisco. A son, Ashfield Ellis Stow, was born in San Francisco August 2, 1889.

FRANK O. SUIRE.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 11.—"I am still practicing law in Cincinnati, and I am happy to state the last few years have brought rather more practice and less pure theory than those immediately preceding. I am not married, have taken no journeys of any consequence abroad or elsewhere. Am a member of numerous political and social clubs, but one of which I am in any degree proud of, the University Club of Cincinnati, of which I am a Director. Have no titles, other than A. B., Harvard, and LL. B., Law School Cincinnati College. Have made no addresses other than a few political speeches."

WILLIAM H. TALBOTT.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 2.—"My wife died February 10, 1888. In May of that year I fell ill with nervous prostration. Since then my time has been almost exclusively occupied in regaining my health."

ARTHUR TAYLOR.

BOSTON, MASS., April 18.—"In June, 1886, took my degree LL. B., at the Law School (Harvard). Am still engaged in practice of law, since August, 1889, at 10 Tremont Street, Boston, where I am now."

WILLIAM G. TAYLOR.

NEW YORK, June 7.—"In the last four years I have not performed any act or changed my status in any way that would stand to the world for advancement and success. I have lived and worked; but the life and work have been more internal than external. In the imperfection of things mundane, it falls to the lot of very few of us to reach a just distribution of energy between the theoretical, the reasoning and musing, if you will, and the practical, the healthily material. My dwelling place for all this time has been in Europe.

The winters of '87 and '88 were spent in Paris. The summers in travel in Italy, Germany, to the North Cape, Sweden, Russia, etc., in company with the other members of the family. The winters of '89 and '90 were spent in Leipsic, Germany, and also last summer.

"While battling with inability to sleep, I tried not to degenerate and so attended a good many lectures at the École des Sciences Politiques, and at Leipsic University.

"I am now in New York looking somewhat into the workings of the hotel business."

JOHN S. TEBBETS.

OMAHA, April 7.—"From the time of the last report until September 1, 1886, I continued as assistant general freight agent of the Kansas division of the Union Pacific Railway. On September 1, 1886, I was appointed general passenger and ticket agent of the entire Union Pacific Railway. On March 1, 1889, I returned to the freight department as first assistant general freight agent, and on December 1, 1889, I was made general freight agent.

"I am a member of the Kansas City, Denver, and Omaha Clubs, and am also Vice-President of the Omaha Harvard Association."

[Was appointed General Manager of the Union Pacific Coal Department, June 27, 1890.]

JOHN J. THOMSEN, JR.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—"My address is 16 West Madison Street, Baltimore. I am still in the drug business."

HOWARD TOWNSEND.

NEW YORK, April 25.—"I am permanently settled in New York. When I last wrote you I was managing clerk of the firm of Davies, Cole & Rapallo. I became a partner in that firm May 1, 1887. Soon afterward Mr. Cole retired from the firm and we formed a partnership under the firm name of Davies & Rapallo. On May 1, 1890, Mr. Rapallo will retire from the firm, which will continue under the name of Davies, Short & Townsend.

"I was married April 17, 1888, to Sophia Witherspoon, daughter of Charles Denston Dickey of New York City. Mrs. Townsend's mother, Mary Witherspoon Dickey, died in 1881. I have two children, Sophie Witherspoon and Howard.

"I was secretary of the committee on admissions of the Harvard Club in this city for a few months succeeding its incorporation. I have held no other offices of any kind and have received no college degrees. I am a member of the Union, University, Down Town, and Harvard Clubs, of the St. Nicholas Society, and of the Bar Association of the City of New York.

"I have written no books, pamphlets, or magazine articles, nor have I addressed any public meetings. I can lay claim to no political, scientific, literary, or commercial activity. I do not mean by this that I am in a state of mental coma, but my professional work occupies my time to the exclusion of almost everything else, and what little leisure remains I have devoted to general (and, too often, desultory) reading rather than to any special line of work."

RICHARD TRIMBLE.

Has not been heard from since 1886.

FREDERIC ALLISON TUPPER.

Shelburne Falls, Mass., April 5.— "Since 1887 I have been principal of Arms Academy, Shelburne Falls, Massachusetts. March 24, 1890, my wife, Mary Isabel Tupper, died.

"In March, 1887, a new edition of 'Moonshine' was published by the John W. Lovell Company, New York, as number 895 in Lovell's Library. In 1888 some of my verses, including 'The Mist,' 'Snow Pictures,' 'Haymakers,' 'Blonde and Brunette,' 'Contrast,' 'Autumn Days,' 'Musing,' 'My Message,' and 'For an Album,' were published in 'A Collection of Poems by America's Younger Poets,' by the Westminster Publishing Company, Philadelphia. In 1889 an article of mine, entitled the 'Antiquity of the Tupper Family,' appeared in the October number of the Magazine of American History. I have written many verses for the Springfield Republican, the Greenfield Gazette and Courier, the Arms Student, and other publications. It seems to be my duty to write class odes for the graduating classes at Arms Academy, also to deliver the address to graduates, and to preside at the annual Alumni dinner. In 1889, I spoke at the Conway dinner on the subject of 'Women and the Classics.' At Mr. C. E. Norton's famous Ashfield dinner I spoke on the following topic: 'A Plea for a Higher Civilization.' As Mr. Norton, Joseph H. Choate, President Stanley Hall, and George William Curtis were the principal speakers on that occasion, you may easily imagine the feelings of an '80 man. At the 'Deerfield Summer School of History and Romance' I read a paper on 'Certain Tendencies in American Fiction.' I also gave an evening's reading from my own writings. Earlier in the year I delivered the unveiling address and poem on the occasion of the presentation of a portrait of Ira Arms to Arms Academy. In 1888 I was guilty of delivering two political addresses. I continue to write in a desultory way verses, sketches, and stories, but do not seem to arouse the interest of the public.

"I am greatly interested in the subject of genealogy, and have been helping in a small way Rev. Henry M. Tupper, D. D., of Raleigh, North Carolina, on his 'Tupper Book.' In volume four of 'American Ancestry' I have published my lineage so far as ascertained."

BRADFORD S. TURPIN.

West Yarmouth, Mass., May 22.—"I have nothing of interest to report. My address is 219 Cottage Street, Dorchester, Mass."

JOHN LOTHROP WAKEFIELD.

Boston, May 19.—"I have been living in Dedham and practicing law in Boston. In April, 1887, I entered the office of the Massachusetts Title Insurance Company, and am still in its employ. During most of this time I have performed the duties of assistant manager."

CHARLES WARE.

Has not been heard from.

CHARLES EVERETT WARREN.

Boston, June 7.—"I have lived in Boston at 51 Union Park since 1886, engaged in the practice of medicine and as contributor to various scientific and secular periodicals and newspapers.

"I have been a stay-at-home since 1886 as far as foreign countries are concerned, but have been over our own country in nearly every section.

"Am still assistant physician to the Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women. Was delegate for Massachusetts Medical Society to American Medical Association in 1888–'89–'90, attending meetings at Newport, R. I., and Nashville, Tenn. Was 'made a Mason' in 1888, and have joined several minor societies. Am medical examiner for the Western Mutual Life Insurance Company and other societies.

"I have written many articles too numerous to mention. A few are as follows: 'How to Catch Fish with a Bottle,' Wide-Awake, 1889. This article was reproduced in the New York World and other papers and was reprinted in Squire's— of New York City — Catalogue. 'My $1500 Negative,' a photographic story in Photographic Times of New York. 'Life History Albums,' 'Superstitions About Children,' and other articles in Babyhood, 1889. 'Medical Fallacies'—Boston Globe. 'Recent Remedies'—Medical World. 'Passion and the Modern Critic'—Cincin- nati Clinic. 'Fun in the Orchestra'—Boston Times. 'Aphaisms in Diseases of Children'—Philadelphia Medical Times. 'A Plea for Uniformity' in Boston Medical and Surgical Journal. 'Marking Books'—The Writer. 'Identification'—St. Louis Medical and Surgical Journal. A number of articles have appeared in book form: 'Short Credit Makes Long Friends,' Nicholas Curtis' Legacy, Sorts, A Few Notes About Gossips, etc., etc. I have in press a 'Red Letter Day Calendar,' a Posey Calendar, Evidence in Black and White. Leon Noel, A Tale of the Red Cross, Sterility, Golden Points About Advertising, Prognostic Aphaisms, 1000 Brick for the Building of a Perfect Man, 'How to Treat a Cold,' Germs and Germicides, etc. Had papers at American Medical Association on Identification, Biometry, Relation of Dress and Disease, and Dogmatism. I am now making a specialty of Syndicate Letters to the Press.

"I have patented an inhaler and invented a number of instruments and appliances, among them are a mouth gag or anastotome, a tenaculum, a safety shell for holding disinfectants, a disinfectant distributor, a combination bottle, etc. Am interested in several proprietary articles, Pepsia, a digestive salt; Pelvis Pirii Pemiliaris Ampa, a disinfectant; Tonic and Laxative Pills, etc.

"All of this writing is done in spare moments late at night, often after twelve or else in the early morning about four. I am a great deal in the open air and spend my summer vacation in the woods, camping out, and also take a short coaching tour.

"I am engaged in the practice of medicine, making a specialty of nervous disease."

CHARLES G. WASHBURN.

WORCESTER, MASS., April 7.—"I have continued to reside in Worcester, Mass. Am assistant secretary and counsel of the Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., wire manufacturers. I was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in February, 1887.

"April 25, 1889, I was married in St. John's Church, Providence, to Caroline Vinton, daughter of Horatio N. Slater, Esq., of Webster, Mass.

"I am a member of the University Club, New York.

"In 1889, I wrote a paper upon the manufacturing industries of Worcester, which was published in that year as part of the history of Worcester County."

HENRY RANDALL WEBB.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19.—"Since 1886, I have resided in Washington in the District of Columbia, practicing law with varied and not very great success. My clients are still few and far between, and up to the present time I have not climbed far enough up the ladder to find that place where there is plenty of room, but so far I have it very crowded and plenty of hustlers around. I was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, May 31, 1883, and to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, April 15, 1890. I am at present connected with the firm of Webb & Webb, attorneys and counselors at law.

"In August, 1886, I made my first voyage across the Atlantic [spending the summer in Great Britain]. In August, 1887, I again crossed the Atlantic and landed in Antwerp. From thence I took the usual hurried trip of an American tourist, through Holland, up the Rhine, visiting Cologne, Coblentz, Frankfort, Mayence and Heidelberg, making a flying visit to Switzerland and spending a week in Paris and London, then to Liverpool and home. I missed seeing Oxford, much to my regret, by being wrongly informed about the trains through the ignorance and stupidity or possibly cussedness of the agent at the American Exchange in London. In August, 1888, I made a most delightful trip through Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Isle, but, as this can not be considered as a foreign journey, I will go into no further detail.

"I became a member of the Cosmos Club of Washington, D. C., in January, 1887, and a member of the Society of the Cincinnati of the State of Maryland, on the 22d of February, 1887.

[Married Maria, daughter of Rev. Osborne Ingle, June 11, 1890, at Frederick, Mo.]

ALBERT B. WEIMER.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 7.—"Is practicing law in Philadelphia. He was abroad during the summers of 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, and 1889.

"He is a member of the following organizations: Historical Society of Pennsylvania; The American Academy of Political and Social Science; University Club of Philadelphia; Civil Service Reform Association; Pennsylvania Forestry Association (member of the Council); Indian Rights Association (Recording Secretary); Philadelphia Shakespeare Society; Law Association of Philadelphia; Harvard Club of Philadelphia.

"Since 1886 he has prepared a compilation of the school laws of Philadelphia, edited new editions of Yeate's and Parson's Reports, and written a number of articles for the American and English Encyclopædia of Law. He has also prepared and published a small set of tables showing the characteristic features of Norman and Gothic Architecture in England, and a table of the Latin Subjunctive for use in schools."

C. M. WELD.

BOSTON, May 31.—"I am still in the cotton manufacturing business at 131 Devonshire Street, Boston.

"On April 24, 1889, I was married to Marian Linzee, daughter of the late T. C. A. Linzee and Sarah Torrey, of Boston. A daughter was born on May 17, 1890."

R. W. G. WELLING.

NEW YORK CITY, May 14.—"I am perfectly sure that nothing remarkable has happened to me, but your earnest efforts deserve and shall receive the following conscientious statement: I am still busily engaged practicing law, at No. 2 Wall Street. The University and Harvard are my only social clubs. I am a director and secretary of the Symphony Society and of the Commonwealth Club, and I belong to the Bar Association, the Rhode Island Historical Society, the Berkeley Athletic Club, the Ballot Reform League, the City Reform Club, and the New York Cremation Society, being President of the last two."

F. H. WHEELAN.

SANTA BARBARA, May 7.—"In December, 1886, the firm of Steele & Wheelan sold out their flouring mill to the Central Milling Co., a corporation owning all the mills in a large section of our State. I was made General Superintendent, with office at San José. In February, 1888, I resigned my position of General Superintendent of the Central Milling Co. and came to Santa Barbara to manage the Southern Mill & Warehouse Co. I was one of the original incorporators of that company, and am still its general manager.

"On May 18, 1887, I married, at San Francisco, Albertine Randall, daughter of Albert Gallatin Randall and Augusta Frost Randall. Edgar Stow Wheelan was born at San Francisco, April 7, 1888, and bids fair to make a stroke oar.

"I have done some light literary work in the way of a few poems and short stories for St. Nicholas and other magazines, all of which stories and poems have been illustrated by my wife."

S. MERRICK WHITCOMB.

TARPON SPRINGS, FLA., July 5.—"Since 1886 I have resided in Tarpon Springs, Florida. I am engaged in orange-growing, and have considerable real estate interest.

"I married, early in February, 1888, Lettie S. Fernald, daughter of George W. Fernald, formerly of Portsmouth, N. H.

"I am interested here with a Philadelphia syndicate in promoting the interests of the town and the surrounding country. We have recently incorporated the University of Florida located here. The medical courses will be given this winter. We are also trying to establish here, upon the Gulf of Mexico, a Biological Station, similar to the one in Naples, Italy. Mr. Disston, Dr. Chas. E. Sajons, F. A. Davis of Philadelphia, and Professor W. P. Wilson of the University of Pennsylvania are among those interested.

"This is a new country, although a very delightful one, and our enterprises are necessarily young, though, we think, substantially grounded."

FRANKLIN D. WHITE.

MILTON, MASS., April 7— "My residence since 1886 has been at Milton, Mass. I have been in the banking and brokerage business since September, 1886. My only journey in foreign countries has been a business trip of three months in England.

"I am a member of the Racquet Court Club of New York, and Puritan and Athletic clubs of Boston."

WILLIAM HOWARD WHITE.

BOSTON, MASS., April 28.— "Since the date of our last report I have continued to reside at Brookline, Mass., and have been occupied almost exclusively with the practice of law."

FREDERICK E. WHITING.

BOSTON, MASS., April 5.—"I was admitted as a partner in the firm owning the Boston Herald, March 1, 1888.

"I have another son, Philip Erwin Whiting, born May 15, 1885."

ALFRED WILKINSON.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 18.—"During the years of 1887 and 1888, I studied and practiced law in the law office of Knapp, Nottingham & Andrews, Syracuse, having been admitted to the bar in April, 1887. In December, 1888, I accepted a position with Mr. George W. Hey, Patent Attorney, Syracuse, as managing clerk of his office. I held this position during the whole of the year 1889, and on the 1st of January, 1890, he associated me in business with himself under the firm name of Hey, Wilkinson & Parsons, with our main office at Syracuse, and a branch office in Rochester. We are actively engaged in patent litigation and the soliciting of patents for inventors throughout the larger portion of the State from Albany to Buffalo.

"I have made no journeys to foreign countries, except a short one during the spring of the present year, when I was in Italy four or five weeks.

"I am a member of the Harvard Club of New York, the Century Club of Syracuse, and the Genesee Valley Club of Rochester."

WILLIAM WINLOCK.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"I retained the position to which I was appointed August 2, 1880, that of assistant astronomer at the U. S. Naval Observatory, up to the 15th of May, 1889, when I accepted the office of curator of exchanges in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, succeeding Dr. J. H. Kidder (H.U., 1862), who died April 8, 1889. I should explain, perhaps, that the Curator of Exchanges has the immediate charge of the Smithsonian exchange system, the International Exchange Bureau of the U. S. Government, through which is effected an exchange of the official publications of the Government, and of scientific and literary societies in the United States, for publications of foreign governments and of societies in all parts of the world.

"November 6, 1889, I received from the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, Mr. S. P. Langley (LL.D., Harvard, 1886), the further appointment of Honorary Curator of Apparatus, in this capacity having care of the collection of physical apparatus belonging to the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, and I have also been engaged in assisting Mr. Langley in the installation of a temporary astrophysical laboratory or observatory connected with the Institution.

"With regard to published writings, I may mention the reviews of astronomical progress for the years 1886, 1887, and 1888 in the Smithsonian reports, and the review of astronomy for 1889 in Appleton's Annual Cyclopædia for that year; also articles on Observatories and Telescopes in the American Supplement to the Encyclopædia Britannica. A great many notes and more technical astronomical articles I need scarcely mention here.

"Journeys in foreign countries I have none to report. I was elected a 'Mitglied' of the Astronomische Gesellschaft of Leipzig, September 10, 1889, and a member of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific of San Francisco, May 31, 1890 I retain my membership in the Cosmos Club, serving as a member of the committee on admissions from 1886 to 1890, and as secretary of the club since January 13, 1890. I have been a member of the general committee of the Philosophical Society, the oldest of the existing scientific societies of Washington, since December 18, 1886, and have been one of the secretaries of the society since December 21, 1887. I served as Vice-President of the Washington Harvard Club for 1888 and 1889, and have been secretary of that club since January 7, 1890; also secretary of the society of the Sons of the American Revolution of the District of Columbia since May 5, 1890.

"I may add that I have held the professorship of astronomy in the Corcoran Scientific School of the Columbian University, Washington, since October, 1886, and honorary member of the Alumni Association since February 28, 1887."

[A third child, a boy, was born July 7, 1890.]

ROBERT WINSOR.

WESTON, MASS., May 8.—"I live in Weston, Mass., and am still a clerk in the banking house of Messrs. Kidder, Peabody & Co., in Boston. Another son, Frederick, was born March 15, 1889, in Weston."

JOHN WOODBURY.

BOSTON, April 5.—"I am still engaged in the practice of the law in Boston. My home is in that city in winter, and in Lynn in summer.

"I spent the summer of 1886 in Europe.

"I am a member of the Union Club, Boston Art Club, Archæological Institute of America, and Dante Society of Cambridge."

TEMPORARY MEMBERS.

The record of temporary members is incomplete. All are included who have subscribed to any of the class funds, whether they have been heard from or not. As for the rest, each has been asked twice to report himself, and the answers received are printed here. This report is sent only to those who have taken the trouble to contribute to it or to the class fund.

CHARLES N. ALLEN.

MOOSUP, CONN., April 23.— Is practicing medicine at Moosup. "Am President of the Windham Co. Medical Association for the present year, also medical examiner (coroners) for the towns of Canterbury and Sterling."

WILLIAM T. ANDREWS.

BOSTON, June 13.— "Since January, 1885, I have resided in Boston, or its neighborhood, and for a portion of this time I held the position of secretary and treasurer of a manufacturing company, with head-quarters in this city. Previously, I had charge of some industrial works in Virginia.

"For the past two-and-a-half years I have been engaged in business under my own name, as manufacturers' agent and commission merchant in the line of steam engineering appliances.

"I am a member of the Puritan Club and Boston Athletic Association.

"Have had U. S. Letters Patent granted on inventions of mine."

WILLIAM R. BARBOUR.

DENVER, COL., April 22.—"I continued my residence in New York City till March, 1888, when the firm of Rochfort & Barbour was dissolved and is removed to Denver to continue there the practice of law.

HELIOTYPE PRINTING CO.,

BOSTON.

WALTER HASTINGS HALL—DORMITORY.

FRONT ON NORTH AVENUE, REAR ON HOLMES FIELD

"I was married June 5, 1889, at New Canaan, Conn., to Edith Lambert, daughter of Dr. Edward W. and Martha (Waldron) Lambert of New York City."

JOHN C. BOND.

SOMERVILLE, MASS., April 22.—"I suppose that you think I ought to be prepared to send something interesting for the class report, even if it were nothing more than my obituary. But four additional years of business life, and the fact that I have become a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, is all that you will have to add to my communication of 1886. I shall, however, hope, fatis propitiis, to be able to give a better account of myself in 1895."

EDWARD BROOKS.

BOSTON, April 18.—"In October, 1888, I moved to Brush Hill, Milton, Mass. I am in the same line of business as before [real estate and mortgages]. Children: Edward, Jr., born May 19, 1887; Elizabeth Hammond, born September 24, 1888."

HENRY D. BURNHAM.

BOSTON, May 19.—Lives "principally in Boston, Mass." Has no business or profession. Was married April 30, 1888, in Philadelphia to Johanna Heckscher, daughter of Richard Heckscher and Lucretia L. Stevens. A daughter, Johanna H. Burnham, was born June 17, 1889, at Bar Harbor, Maine.

Made short trips to London and Paris in 1887–1888–1889. Is a member of the Somerset, Algonquin, Athletic, Country, and Myopia Hunt Clubs of Boston, the Union and Knickerbocker Clubs of New York, the New York Jockey Club, Kebo Valley Club of Bar Harbor, and the New York, Eastern and Beverly Yacht Clubs.

M. B. BUTLER.

Has not been heard from.

EDWARD K. CLARKE.

Clarke's address was unknown from 1882 until this summer, when a circular sent out in regard to several missing addresses, brought the desired information. He writes as follows from San Francisco, August 17th:

"I have been something of a wanderer since 1882, as I left the business I was then in and went to Europe for a short time; thence I went to Detroit, Mich., where I was engaged in business until 1884; thence back to California where I have been since, engaged in no active business but attending to different interests."

SAMUEL W. CUMMINGS.

Boston, April 11.—Is a member of the firm of Cummings & Hooper, real estate and mortgage brokers, Boston, Mass. Made journeys to Europe in 1887 and in 1888. Is a member of the Somerset Club, Boston.

NATHANIEL HENCHMAN DAVIS.

Cincinnati, O., April 8.—"Have continued to reside, and practice law, in Cincinnati. Married April 26, 1887, Jeannette Alice Skinner, daughter of Major J. Ralston Skinner and Louisa (Wiggins) Skinner. Daughter, Louise Bartow, born March 28, 1888. 1887—Spent six months in Great Britain, Italy and France. 1889—Windward Islands, Venezuela, Mexico, etc. Societies, etc.—Vice-president University Club, Chairman Executive Committee Bar Association, Secretary Committee of 100, Treasurer Historical Society, etc."

*WILLIAM R. DUNCKLEE.

Died of consumption, February 10, 1889, at Cleveland, Ohio, in his thirty-second year.

PIERREPONT EDWARDS.

Has not been heard from.

GEORGE W. HALL.

LAWRENCE, MASS., April 13.—"I am still living and doing business in Lawrence.

"In January, 1888, I purchased an interest in the firm, where I had been previously employed, and the firm became D. S. Hall & Son, doing business at the old stand.

"While taking no very active part in politics, I was elected a member of our city government in 1888, serving as councilman; was re-elected last fall, and on the organization of the government in January, was made president of the Common Council."

*EDWARD HOLLAND HASTINGS.

Edward Holland Hastings was born in Cambridge, Mass., on February 1, 1857, and was the son of Thomas Nelson and Harriett Mead Hastings. Soon after the death of his father in 1859, his mother returned to her old home in Walpole, N. H., where his early education was acquired in the village schools. In 1871 he entered the Cambridge High School, and from there he passed, in 1872, to Phillips Academy, at Exeter, New Hampshire, where he took a course of four years.

He was a favorite with his classmates who elected him their class President. He entered Harvard College with the class of 1880, but a period of illness prevented his taking the examinations at the close of the freshman-year. He returned as a special student for the academic year of 1877–8. The following year he left Cambridge and engaged in the banking and brokerage business in Boston. On August 21, 1879, he was married to Mary H. Gaskill, daughter of Tyler B. Gaskill of Chicago, Ill. Two children were born to them, but neither of them survive him.

In 1882, Fred Vokes and others began the work of tearing down the old Gaiety Theatre, in Boston, and building a new theatre on the same premises. Work progressed until the old theatre was torn down, when, owing to misunderstandings between the parties, the project was abandoned. Hastings, with the co-operation of friends, leased the property of Charles Francis Adams and built the new theatre, the Bijou. A corporation was organized to carry it on, of which he later became President and general manager.

It was his design to devote the theatre to the production of light opera in the best manner. On December 11, 1882, the theatre was opened with a memorable first production in Boston of Gilbert and Sullivan's Iolanthe. Scenery, costumes, properties, score, and all matters of detail were exactly copied from those of the London performance, and the company was drilled by a person selected by the authors. The piece proved a great success, and after a long run was followed by equally carefully prepared performances of other of Gilbert and Sullivan's works, and of other light operas, among the most prominent of which were the Beggar Student, Pounce & Co., and A Trip to Africa. Later the comedy company of Charles Wyndham, of London, made its first appearance at this theatre. Hastings was the moving spirit of the enterprise, and it was to his excellent taste and unlimited enthusiasm in musical and theatrical matters that the public owe the series of excellent performances which they enjoyed during his brief career as a theatrical manager. In these years he made several trips to Europe, more or less in connection with business, and on one of them, at the instance of Sir Arthur Sullivan, was elected a member of the Royal Society of Analytical Critics, a musical and theatrical society of London. For a time the theatre met with success, but later the public support proved insufficient to warrant carrying it on in the lines on which it had been started. The building passed into other hands and the corporation was dissolved. Hastings then formed a connection with the Sprague Electric Motor Company of Philadelphia, Pa., which continued until his death, after a short illness from typhoid pneumonia, at the family home in Walpole, on March 4, 1889.

Hastings was a member of the Lafayette Lodge of Boston of the order of Free Masons, in which he had taken the thirty-second degree. In college he was a member of the Everett Athenæum and Pi Eta societies, and of the Pierian Sodality.

Enough has been said of his life to give evidence of his taste and love for music, but it is only those who knew him well who can realize how excellent his talent for music was, and how great a part the enjoyment of music played in his life. Hastings was of a frank and open disposition, generous and kindly, with a good humor and a trustfulness in human nature, which made him hosts of friends and no enemies.

J. W.

ARTHUR C. HILL.

Boston, July 25.—"My residence is at Somerville, Mass. Am with the firm of Hill & Cutler, Boston, in the Cotton and Cotton Waste business.

"I am at present clerk of the East Somerville Baptist Church, and a member of the Vermont Association, Mystic Valley Club, and Boston Baptist Social Union."

G. ARTHUR HILTON.

Taunton, Mass., May 23.—Was admitted to the Bar in June, 1882, and is still practicing law in Boston. "I have made no journeys to foreign lands, save a trip to Victoria over the Canadian Pacific in the fall of '88. The only degree received by me is that of LL. B. from Boston University.

"I was elected Recording Secretary of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in February last. Am a member of the Puritan and Boston Athletic Clubs, Abstract Club, Massachusetts Reform Club, Tariff Reform League, and Bar Association City of Boston."

FRANCIS M. HOLDEN.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.— "1886 and 1887 I spent in Europe. I passed the winter of '86 in Italy, the spring in Switzerland, and the summer in Munich, where I lived in a German family; thence to Vienna, where I was seven months. I then hastened to London to witness the Queen's jubilee. I took the summer course in obstetrics in the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, where I met Baldwin of our class, and Nash, '79.

"I was married January 3, 1888, to Emma Arndt Lombaert, daughter of Herman J. Lombaert and Sarah Lombaert, and we have a daughter, Katherine Holden, born November 13, 1889.

"I am a member of the Philadelphia Obstetrical Society and Orpheus Club."

RUFUS K. HOWELL.

Was married June 18, 1886, in Exeter, N. H., to Lilla Folsom Titcomb, and has one daughter, Violet Boone Howell, born September, 1887. At the time of his marriage, and for a considerable period afterwards, was principal of the high school at Wills Point, Texas. Is now living in Monte Vista, Lake County, Florida, and is a member of the Bar.

FREDERICK D. HUSSEY.

ANTON LEISTER.

[All who remember Leister's brilliant record as a scholar while he was with us, will be glad to know of his keen interest in the class, and his desire to be fully represented in this report. I have had several letters from him in regard to it, and after much hesitation have decided to print his contribution in full, partly because I found it impossible to abridge it without spoiling it, but quite as much because it is so interesting and unusual.— F. A.]

Brunswick, O., May 6.—"From November, 1883, to September, 1885, I was practically a dead man, so far as the rest of the world was concerned. From general physical prostration, neuralgia, dyspepsia and mental discouragement, I gave up the struggle altogether, expecting never again to be of account or use to the world. For two years I remained in a ten-by-ten room day and night, summer and winter, neither expecting nor desiring to leave it alive. I loathed books, seldom spoke to any one except my mother, read papers, reflected on the past, concealed the present mental anguish and physical pain from every one.

"By insensible degrees things took a turn. I began to feel an interest in matters again. Studied out and made the drawings for an improvement in the draft of a harvester made in Akron, Ohio. Did not send the improvement to the makers of the machine, and six months later it was invented and introduced by another, and is still in use on all Buckeye down binders. From the range table under 'Gunnery' in Encyclopædia Britannica calculated a range table for my brother's rifle, which later proved correct within a reasonable limit of accuracy. Began to work making ax helves. Still feared books and expected never to use them again. At the age of 35 began life again at just the point where I began twenty years before, but with this difference, that then I had more physical strength, could earn better wages, and did not feel my poverty. During summer of 1886 painted, dug cisterns, did farm work of all kinds, but was not very strong. Studied books on hygiene, and made experiments of hygienic nature. During the following winter lived and slept alone in an old shop, making ax helves and cutting stove-wood for 50 cents a cord for a living. On cold mornings it was nothing unusual to awake and find beard and blankets stiff with ice from frozen breath.

"In 1887, worked for my father for six months as farm laborer. He and I had trouble the year before, so that I left home. The fact that my mother was there was the only thing that kept me from leaving the country, too. During this summer I began to lean toward books and pen again. Planned to teach school during the coming winter, but the lingering sickness of my brother from sunstroke put an end to that plan. The work as farm drudge at $16 per month, under another man's curatorship, did not suit my tastes, and I took a new tack. During the winter my brother married, and asked me to live with him. We made a bargain that should give me control of some of my time for study, etc., but from various reasons, dissatisfaction arose, and in April, 1888, I left.

"I then tried the last and desperate measure. I rented a house, moved all my traps and myself into it, and from that day to this

> 'Not the Mogul, or Czar of Muscovy,
> Not Prester John, or Cham of Tartary,
> Are in their houses monarchs more than I.'

"At first I was poor as a church mouse, my living dependent on my day's earnings. My rule and principle became this: There are two ways to become content; first, be rich and satisfy every want as it arises; secondly, suppress and restrict all desires which are beyond your means to gratify. The poverty which at first seemed a hardship has become a blessing. More than one has said: 'You are rich.' I wear plain clothes, eat plain fare, try to do a certain amount of mental work with the necessary physical, attend to gymnastics and hygiene, and for the rest 'let the wide world wag as it will,' well knowing that if only I have good health, and work for body and mind, and the desire to perform it, I have the greatest wealth earth can afford any man. Following this rule, I have worked hard at times when I had no work, splitting wood for no pay but my board, just to keep myself in fighting trim against the time when work should come. Likewise, last summer, during several months of no work, I walked and ran from 8 to 15 miles every day for similar hygienic and economic reasons, and it paid, too. My first job after that was corn-cutting, and in three days I cut 9¼ acres, and made $10.10. The usual stint for a fair cutter is 1 to 1¼ acres per day, at $1.00 per acre.

"During June, 1888, sheared sheep. In the summer I do farm work; in winter make ax helves. During the past winter I studied this trade until I could make nine good helves in three hours, where before the same work took me three times as long.

"During the last two years I have practiced on the violin, and studied the history of the instrument some. If time and strength hold out, I hope to write something on 'learning to bow—from the mechanical and anatomical point of departure.'

"Last summer my mother was taken ill, and, after a long sickness, died on January 21, 1890. The circumstances of her life during the last few years, and of her final sickness, were such as happily do not often occur in civilized communities, and then only when, as in this case, those who have the care of an aged person, and who should foster and cherish the last years of an aged parent, only long for the coming of death to relieve them of the unwelcome burden. Since her death I feel alone, indeed.

"In regard to my manner of living I would further say that I get my dinner at a neighboring house, and for breakfast and supper I depend upon 'hard-tack' and fruits, especially apples. 'Hard-tack' is an invention of my own, made of Graham flour stirred with milk (nothing else) and baked. It is good stuff to ridicule, and—to give a man the strength of a horse. Only recently, on a breakfast of ½ pound of this 'Pumpernickel' and one apple, I pitched on wagon 21 loads of manure in five hours—40 loads for the day. The man who hired me said 25 or 30 loads was the work of a good pitcher, and he raised my wages. Last Saturday I split and piled a cord of average splitting wood in 45 minutes, for half a day. The usual average one whole day's work is a cord in 1½ to 2 hours.

"Since last fall I am a disciple of the Jaeger system—'All wool all the year round.' It pays. Try it, classmates. Send for circular or book of essays to Doctor Jaeger's Sanitary Woolen System Company, 827 and 829 Broadway, New York.

"Nights I sleep with windows all open; and a strong wind blowing over my bed is nothing unusual or dreaded, even if it is cold and foggy as this morning. Of course I cover, and do not allow myself to get chilled. I drink nothing stronger than milk or soft water; eat not over 15 pounds of meat per year; wear sandals in summer, shoes of my own designing in winter; adapt my clothing to the season and climate at all times; cut my hair once a year or less, my beard not at all. Am noted hereabouts for my erect walk ('Roman walk' one old Frenchman calls it) and my 'hot temper.' The following are some of the pet names by which I am known: 'Dutch Fool,' 'Crank,' 'Too Particular,' 'Professor Leister,' (by the Frenchman, in answer to those who say D. F.), 'Flying Dutchman,' 'Terror,'' 'Works like a horse,' 'As honest a man as treads in Medina County,' (confession of an enemy), 'Hard to get along with,' 'Must be a good man' (confession of another man who meanly wronged me), etc, etc.

"My father, sisters, and many others, hate and fear me; my mother thought the world of me, and so do my aunt, uncle, cousins, and a few others.

"Of literary work I have but little to say, though that little be long. In the winter of 1888 I began to write. The titles of the articles published are given below. The articles vary from one-half to four columns in length.

"'Learn German,' Cincinnati Volksfreund (German article). Daily, January 16; weekly January 18, 1888. Signature, 'Germanus.' Also in translation, in Medina Gazette, February 10, 1888.

"'The Ideal Work-Shop,' American Inventor, Cincinnati, January, 1888.

"'Are the Methods of Instruction in the Public Schools Calculated to Produce Good Citizens?' Criticism of question. Medina Democrat, March 9, 1888.

"'Pruning Grape-Vines.' Medina Gazette, March 22, 1888.

"'Peep Sights,' Shooting and Fishing, August 16, 1888, Boston.

"'Springing of Rifle Barrels,' Chicago, American Field, December 25, 1886. Signature, 'Small Bore.'

"'Cross Shots,' same, February 12, 1887. Signature, 'Small Bore.'

"'Camping Out,' same, September 24, 1887.

"'Rifle Questions,' same, February 18, 1888. Signature, 'Small Bore.'

"'The influence of Sportsmanship on National Character and Progress,' same, March 9, 1889.

"'Cheap living.' Giving some personal experiences. New York Weekly Witness, January 30, 1889. This article was quoted in New York Tribune, of March 20, 1889, and brought an invitation from editor to contribute direct to columns of the Tribune. My hint to him that writing for glory only will put no butter on my bread, and that consequently I am willing to condescend to accept lucre for my writings, was treated with respectful but ominous silence. This article also brought an invitation from the President of the Vegetarian Society of America to join that organization.

"'Unbolted Flour.' New York Witness, April 3, 1889. Giving method of making the 'Hardtack' (improved since then), which is the mainstay of my thrift and powers to do hard work with small expense.

"'Questions on Boildieu's Overture, "Caliph of Bagdad,"' Boston Leader, January or February, 1889.

"Local correspondence for Medina Gazette (heading, 'Abbeyville') during three months in spring of 1888. Signature, 'Krank De Krabbeville.'

"Local correspondence for same, in March and April, 1890. Signature, 'Rufus Censor.'

"'Road improvement.' Medina Sentinel (supplement), March 27, 1890. A three-column caustic reply to the brilliant $2,000-a-mile-improved-road schemes, published in the Medina Gazette.

"'Obituary' of Mrs. Anna C. Leister, Medina Gazette, January 30, 1890. A limited number of copies at disposal yet. This obituary and articles of 'Rufus Censor' severely criticised in Gazette, April 4, 1890, and door of Gazette slammed in my face for evermore.

"'A Chicken Story, Chapter II.' Ohio Farmer, March 8, 1890. A scathing reply to the visionary, 'An Interesting Chicken Story,' in same, February 1, 1890.

"The following articles were refused, or are not yet submitted to editorial censorship:

"'Is Woman Advancing?' A reply to Julia Ward Howe's answer to this question, in Cleveland Leader and Herald, of November 23, 1889, showing the inconsistency and absurdity of her theory, and defending the 'Ancient Mythus' of the Fall.

"'What Am I Reading?' Sent to Alden, New York, March, 1888. Returned.

"'Mental Explosions — A Criticism,' of certain views in regard to 'Responsibility in Mental Disease,' put forth by Doctor Hudson and Editor Greene, in the Medina Gazette, on occasion of the suicide of the criminal Lotman. Not finished in time.

"'The Ingersoll-Gladstone Controversy.' Written from review of the same in Medina Gazette, without access to original papers in North American Review, and pronounced worthy by Doctor Sage, even in its incomplete form, of a place in the North American Review. Doctor Sage was once leader of the Universalists, and a contributor to North American Review, against Ingersoll, on 'Biblical Inspiration.' MS. 'returned for lack of space.'

"'A Pair of Twins — Does 'a pair of twins' mean two or four persons?' An exhaustive discussion, historical, logical and grammatical, of the above question, with opinions of Professors of English Literature of Harvard, Yale, Baldwin University, and Ohio State Agricultural College, written on occasion of a local warfare in regard to the point in dispute. Returned by Medina Gazette. Too long.

"'The Mills-Otis Mill.' A scathing criticism, with challenge to 'Plover' (John Wise of New York) to try conclusions with me on the manner in which this famous case was managed by the American Field in its columns for three months, beginning with December, 1889. Never published by Field, and refused to return MS.

"'Does Hygiene Pay for Farmers?' Sent to New York Times in December, 1889. Lost while in care of editor.

"'Walking as a Means of Restoring and Preserving Health.' An eight-column essay, treating the subject from the historical, physiological and experimental stand-point; also gives the only rigorous analysis of the mechanical movements involved in the act of walking ever put in print so far as I know. Sent to Good Health Publishing Company, Battle Creek, Mich., and refused. 'Too long.'

"'Physiology in Common Schools.' The same in German.

"A review (in German) of Doctor Gustav Jaeger's 'Theory of Health and Disease,' with special reference to directing the attention of the less educated to it, and encouraging the adoption and use of the 'all-wool' system.

"'Does the Twentieth Century Begin in 1900 or in 1901?' An eight-column criticism and discussion of this famous question, with special view of making it clear to the unlearned why so much noise and dust has been made about this, and yet so little result. Prof. Hart (Harvard, '80) has kindly consented to read this before it is sent to the editors.

"A defense of the Obituary, and of 'Rufus Censor,' in reply to the critics in 'A Correction,' in Medina Gazette, April 4, 1890.

"'Ein Winternachts Traum.' A poem of 35 stanzas, on the birthday anniversary of an aunt, written in three and a half hours, March, 1890. Personæ: A 'wise' man and a 'fool.' Argument: The 'wise' man, from experience, knows all mankind to be untrustworthy and deceitful. The 'fool,' on the other hand, shows what mother's love has done for mankind; that it is unselfish and true, and that one-half of humankind are a 'mother-race.'

"'Machinery vs. the Poor Man.' A ten-column article reviewing the arguments of President Chamberlain of Iowa Agricultural College, the editor and others, who, during August and September, 1889, argued in the columns of the Ohio Farmer that the 'unrestricted multiplication of labor-saving machinery is an absolute blessing to the poor man.' The position taken is that the arguments of the defenders of machinery were mostly self-contradictory and worthless. The MS. was 'accepted,' but returned for condensation, with the note, 'one who can so clearly and forcibly express his views, ought to write on current topics of public interest.' Before the condensation was completed my mother's sickness prevented further attention to it.

"The above list comprises most of my pen-work during the last three years, although I have in addition planned and in part thought out some ideas on practical hygiene, and other subjects.

"The only office I ever held in my life is that of — Road Supervisor, since April 12, 1890. I was elected to this office in consequence of my decided reform views in regard to road matters, as expressed in the article on 'Road Improvement' above mentioned. In less than a week after election I was threatened in private with 'Knock your Dutch head off,' and 'Prosecute you,' and in less than three weeks was attacked in print; all because I would not allow any one to steal road-tax — draw pay for time spent in idleness — as they had been used to doing, and for other reasons. It is understood that it will be a tooth-and-nail fight between the Supervisor and the shirks. I feel well satisfied with results thus far. One editor, who, after publicly saying that my communications would no longer be accepted, and then trying to hold me up to ridicule by representing that I was elected Supervisor to 'honor Yale, from which he is a graduate,' was met by a proposition that I will argue, in speech or print, that, with exception of the School Director's office, the Supervisor's office is one of more honor and more responsibility than any other in the gift of the people, the decision of the question to be left to three competent men and to the public. I propose to open some people's eyes as to the real nature of an office that requires an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and the laws of Ohio, even if that office is supposed to be too mean and contemptible for a dog to hold. One man summed it up by saying: 'I guess they caught a Tartar when they put you in as Supervisor.'

"I am in the midst of house-cleaning now. Sundays I regularly visit an uncle five miles distant, sing, and play the violin with organ accompaniment by a cousin. I am trying to get a job on the Pittsburg, Akron & Western Railroad that is now building through Medina. My main misery is that I am not within easy distance of Harvard library, as I often want to refer to books which I can neither buy, borrow nor steal in this country.

"I wish that those of my former classmates who are poor and discouraged (if there be any such) could, with little effort, learn all that about dress, food, sleep and hygiene in general, physical and moral, which it has taken me a score of years to learn. A great part of man's discontent and trouble comes from the artificial, unnatural, absurd ideas and desires in regard to what is necessary for comfort or respectability. Get the ideas corrected and much of the trouble drops off. I wish that the others of my classmates who are not pressed by want of means could learn to live according to those laws of physical and mental hygiene which, if obeyed, will bring physical and mental health and strength, and will make work comparatively a pleasure, and life a thing to be thankful for."

DANIEL W. LORD.

BOSTON, April 21.—"November 9, 1887, I started for the Pacific slope, and spent the following winter in California.

"In April, '88, I went to Arizona and, as volunteer, joined the Hemenway Archæological Expedition, working under the direction of Mr. Frank H. Cushing, and at that time completing the work of excavation at Los Muirtas, a few miles from the town of Tempe in the Salt River Valley. The expedition broke camp on the 6th of June, and with a number of its members I made the trip on horseback to Zuni, in New Mexico. The camp at that point was the field headquarters for a year. When field work was discontinued at the end of June, 1889, I returned to the East."

THOMAS W. LUDLOW.

YONKERS, N. Y., April 5.—"Since 1886, I have continued to live at Yonkers, and to work as an editorial assistant and contributor upon the Century Dictionary, which is now in course of publication.

"A second daughter—Harriet Frances Carnochan Ludlow—was born to me on December 12, 1889. Otherwise, my life has been entirely uneventful since I last wrote you.

"The American Architect of December 7, 1889, printed a paper by me on 'The American School at Athens and Delphi.'"

GERRY AUSTIN LYMAN.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 27.—"From 1880 to 1887 I was South in the cotton business, but gave it up and entered the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

"I was married March 6, 1886, to Elizabeth Powell Pierce, daughter of the Rt. Rev. H. N. Pierce, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of the State of Arkansas, at Little Rock, Ark.

"I have been twice to Europe. In July, 1872, returning in September, 1872, and in April, 1877, returning in 1879.

"At present I am the contracting freight agent of the Burlington Route, at St. Joseph, Mo."

JOHN L. MARTIN.

LONDON, ENG., June 24.—"I lived in North Carolina the great part of the time from 1886 to 1888. From the fall of 1888 to June, 1890, my home was in Newark, N. J., and my office 13 Park Row, New York.

"I am Vice-President of the Southern & Western Air Line R. R., a road of about 100 miles in process of construction in North Carolina, I am a Director in the New England Phonograph Co., the New York Phonograph Co., and the New Jersey Phonograph Co., also a Director in the International Okonite Co., of London and New York.

"I have made two trips to England and France the past year, and am now in England for the summer. I shall return to New York in the fall and will reside at 67 East 52d St., and my office will be 13 Park Row, New York."

EDWARD I. MORSE.

MARLBORO, MASS., May 27.—"I have not changed my residence or occupation since our last class report. [Morse & Bigelow, General Merchandise, Marlboro.]

"Have had two children since last report, a son born May 7, 1888, by name Robert Dickinson, and another son born this May 21, 1890, as yet unnamed."

CHARLES M. OSBORN, JR.

CHICAGO, August 16. — "I have only one event of interest to add to my last report, viz. : I was married on the 9th day of October, 1889, at Pewee Valley, Ky., to Charlotta E. Matthews, daughter of Charlotta Ann and Lucien George Matthews."

GEORGE G. PETERS.

BOSTON, April 16.—"I have resided in Boston since last report. Was admitted to the firm of Davenport, Peters & Co., May 1, 1887, doing a commission lumber business at 70 Kilby St., Boston.

"Was abroad last winter, during December and January, traveling in England.

"Am a member of the Somerset, Puritan, and Athletic clubs."

ARTHUR S. PLIMPTON.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 4.—"I am still employed as clerk by the White, Potter & Paige Manufacturing Company [designers and manufacturers of picture frames, mouldings and builders' cabinet work]. Have resided in Brooklyn since last report. My two children are Stuart, born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 1, 1887, and Bessie, born in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 14, 1889."

WILLIAM C. PRICE.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 3.—"I am still practicing law in the city of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Have not yet married. Am Major of the 9th Regiment of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, a member of the Westmoreland Club, Board of Trade, and other local organizations.

"My literary activity and authorship is confined almost entirely to acquiring and briefing the principles of law and decisions of the courts."

HARRY SEATON RAND.

Boston, April 14.—Is still in business with the firm of Henry C. Rand & Co., leather and shoe findings, Boston.

FRANK RUSSAK.

Has not been heard from.

EDWARD A. SAWYER.

Gardner, Mass., April 11.—"My residence since 1886 has remained the same — Gardner, Mass. Occupation, physician. Was admitted to the practice of medicine in March, 1883, having graduated from the medical department of the University of the City of New York. A son was born July 28, 1887, who died February 15, 1889.

"Am a member of the Worcester North District Medical Society, and Massachusetts State Medical Society. Am also serving on the local School Board, and Board of Health. Was appointed by Governor Ames in March, 1889, Medical Examiner for the Second Worcester District, and am one of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health. Received my A. M. from Amherst College June, 1886."

CHARLES W. SCRIBNER.

AMES, IOWA, April 9.— "From the spring of 1886 till the close of 1887 I lived at my home, Plainfield, New Jersey, where on account of ill-health my only occupation till the summer of 1887 was some private tutoring. About that time I entered the employ of the Daft Electric Company of New York, remaining with them nearly a year, during the last five months of which, till June, 1888, I was in charge of some of their business in St. Paul, Minn. At that time I was offered the Professorship of Mechanical Engineering in the State College of Agricultural and Mechanic Arts at Ames, Iowa. This college being supported by the United States Land Grant Endowment of 1862, divides its work about equally between general, scientific, and engineering courses of study. I still keep the position, being pretty well satisfied with the work of teaching engineering. Owing to the peculiarity of having originally started some twenty years ago with the long vacation (3½ months) in winter instead of summer, as in other colleges, the chance is afforded of visiting other institutions for study or investigation during their winter session. I spent, in consequence, three months of the past winter abroad, visiting London and Paris, and some few other cities, but spending most of the time studying in Berlin. Going, I reached Liverpool, December 4, 1889, and sailed for home from Antwerp, February 8, 1890. I joined the American Society of Mechanical Engineers about a year ago."

FREDERICK W. SHARON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Was married in San Francisco, August 2, 1884, to Louisa Tevis. A son, Henry William Tevis Sharon, was born September 3, 1885.

T. H. SIMMONS.

Has not been heard from.

GEORGE R. STEPHENS.

CHEYENNE, WYO., May 10.—"I am still engaged in the cattle business in Wyoming Territory, as manager of the Stephens & Mizner Cattle Co."

WALTER C. TIFFANY.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., April 4.—"My residence is still at Minneapolis, my occupation, practicing law.

"I was married April 25, 1888, to Lila R. Robinson, daughter of George R. Robinson, of St. Louis, Mo."

JOHN S. WARREN.

GRANVILLE, N. Y., May 27.—"Since 1886 I have continued to practice law somewhat, giving too much attention to politics It has somehow happened that I have been an inveterate candidate for office —a sort of party hack—sometimes winning against heavy odds, sometimes 'knocked out.' Have been active in numerous conventions, and was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention in New York in 1888. I served on the Board of Supervisors two terms as one of the minority, and in 1888 was the Democratic candidate for member of Assembly, but didn't get there. I have no wives."

CLASS DINNER: JUNE 29, 1886.

ODE.

I.

Our Class, as the seasons bring flowers and fruit,
With each birthday more queenly appears:
All welcome her, even those lips that are mute
And we who keep step with the years.
In the turmoil of life let one hour be delight,
Let one chorus all discords attune!
Was never a night so superb as to-night
In never so perfect a June!

II.

A lover is raised by his love and her prayers
As a boat by the swell of a stream:
For our Class we will struggle and dare as he dares
And our deeds shall accomplish our dream.
For the favor of one others conquer, but we Have a prize fairer far that endures,—
The light of familiar old faces we see,
And the hands that will crown us are yours.

III.

When the years that brought gold, with their silver snow o'er
The gay tresses she tossed in her prime,
Still young, but more stately than ever before,
Will our Queen greet the boys of old time.
And when o'er the last of us flowers are aflame
And sons' sons throng Memorial Hall,
Younger classes shall bow at the sound of thy name,
Class of Eighty, the Queen of them all!

HOTEL BRUNSWICK, BOSTON.

1889.

CLASS OF 1880: HARVARD COLLEGE.

THIRD TRIENNIAL EXAMINATION.

[Time allowed, three hours. Do your work neatly, and avoid haste. Aim at quality of work rather than quantity. Talking during the examination is strictly prohibited.]

I.

Little Neck Clams.

(a) Translate and explain:

1. Mea nunc aperiuntur . .
   clam quae speravi fore. Plautus, Truc., 4, 3, 21.
2. Nec clam esse potuit. Livy, 5, 36.
3. Te commisit alendum clam. Ovid, Met., 13, 432.

(b) If A can do a piece of work in three hours and B can do it in two hours, how long will it take A and B working together? If one man can eat this dinner in three hours, how long will it take eighty men? How long would it take a fast '79 man?

II.

(Take either A or B, but not both.)

A. Green Turtle Aux Quenelles. B. Bouillon.

(a) On what formula is Green Turtle soup, commonly so called, constructed? If it were more honest in its make-up would it still be ordinarily associated in our minds with a Board of Aldermen? Give reasons.

(b) What further association exists between a Board of Aldermen and Bullion?

III.

Boiled Fresh Salmon: Sauce Estragon.
Hollandaise Potatoes. Cucumbers.

(a) Prove by the Darwinian theory of development that fish must always come before meat.

(b) To be in strict accordance with this theory should a dinner culminate with chimpanzee for dessert, or is the descent of man ordinarily more than sufficiently illustrated at the end of a club dinner?

IV.

Tenderloin of Beef: Mushroom Sauce.
New Potatoes. Green Peas. Asparagus.

[N. B. This course is intentionally made rather tough in order to discourage cramming at the outset and promote thorough, well-digested work.]

(a) Contrast a beef-eater of the seventeenth century with a Pi Eta of the nineteenth.

(b) According to Chaucer, in the fourteenth century the hour for breakfast was 5 A. M., for dinner 9 A. M., and for supper 4 P. M. Would Chaucer have called this a dinner or a breakfast?

V.

Discuss systematically one of the following groups:

Croquettes of Sweetbreads. Soft Shell Crabs.
French Peas. Sauce Tartar.

(a) Scan both the above, marking the quantity of each and number of feet of the latter. Decline and parse one.

(b) Is either the creation of an object, or its annihilation, properly called a "change"? What alone is affected by, or subject to, change? Criticise Kirkwood's definition of change as a "perichoretical synechy of pamparallagmatic and horoteroporeumatical differentiations and integrations."

VI.

Roman Punch.

(a) Write three or four lines on one or the other of the following verses, according to political preferences :

1. (For Democrats or Republicans)

"This was the noblest Roman of them all."

2. (For Prohibitionists only)

"I had rather be a dog and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman."

(b) Name in order of time, including this evening, the successive conquests of the Romans. Is Roman Punch one of the Institutes of Justinian ?

(c) Was it a little Roman punch that killed Cæsar ?

Cigarettes.

(d) Explain Mill's distinction between productive and unproductive consumption. Does any illustration occur to you of the latter ?

(e) Translate :

Sganarelle, tenant une tabatière.—Quoi que puisse dire Aristote, il n'est rien d'égal au tabac ; c'est la passion des honnêtes gens, et qui vit sans tabac, n'est pas digne de vivre. Non-seulement il réjouit et purge les cerveaux humains, mais encore il instruit les âmes à la vertu et l'on apprend avec lui à devenir honnête homme. Don Juan.

Judging from the matter and style, should you say that this was written by Miss Edgeworth ? or by Mrs. Opie ?

VII.

Broiled Philadelphia Squab Au Cresson.

Saratoga Chips. Lettuce and Tomato Mayonnaise.

(a) Where is Philadelphia ?

(b) What proofs are there that the bird's fore limb has the number of its bones reduced from the ancestral type ? Diagram of bird's pelvis. How does that of the Ratitæ differ from that of the Carinatæ? Does anything in the Edentate pelvis remind you of this difference?

(c) What is your present opinion of the reputation of the House of Brunswick?

VIII.

Neapolitaine Ice Cream. Charlotte Russe. Fruit Ices.
Spun Candy. Assorted Cake.
Oranges. Bananas. Strawberries.

(a) What are the arguments against the possibility of general over-production or excess of supply? Do you believe in them?

(b) Translate both of the following:

1. Non omnia possumus omnes.
2. Ich seh' dich an, und Wehmuth
   Schleicht mir in's Herz hinein.

(c) Define and illustrate Inertia.

IX.

Roquefort Brie and American Cheese.

(a) Criticise Bouvier's definition of choses in action. How should it be amended so as to include cheese?

(b) Translate Φεῦ, φεῦ, Sophocles, Philoct., 428.

Olives. Crackers. Coffee.

(c) Obtain the formulæ for the equations of the evolute of the abdominal curve before and after dinner. Suggestion. Express x and y in terms of an auxilliary angle θ, assuming $x = a \cos^3 \theta$. $y = a \sin^3 \theta$.

(d) Comment on the following quotation from Cowper's Retirement:

> Arms hanging idly down, hands clasped below,
> Interpret to the marking eye distress.

(e) Who is the author of the familiar lines:

> And the sooner it's over, the sooner to sleep;
> So good-bye * * * .

Supply the three omitted words.

X.

Vox Et Praeterea Nihil.

(a) Who first said that the idea of having to make an after-dinner speech was so terrible to him that it turned all his white bait into bête noir?

(b) What rhetorical ends are sometimes sought by the absence of perspicuity? Illustrate. What is pointed out by Kant as the paralogism of Rational Psychology? Would your ideas on this point have been clearer at the beginning of the paper?

[The preceding questions are prescribed and must be answered by everyone. The remainder are optional. They are for an extra course (open only to Advanced Students), but no additional fee is required. Do not make your answers too full.]

XI.

(a) Give an account of the Whisky Rebellion.

(b) By what single operation may we paralyze the four limbs, the intercostals, and the blood-vessels of the body? Why do we then not paralyze the diaphragm?

(c) How does Schopenhauer prove that Multiplicity or Plurality does not belong to the ding an sich?

(d) A figure six feet high and weighing 150 pounds rests with one end on a smooth horizontal plane and the other against a smooth vertical wall with which it makes an angle of 30°. What is its tension? That is to say, how tight is it? What is its center of gravity, if any?

(e) What is the amount of work stored up in a body weighing 160 pounds and revolving six times in a minute in a circle ten feet in diameter?

HOWARD TOWNSEND,
EUGENE FULLER,
FREDERICK H. ALLEN, } Class Committee.

FREDERIC ALMY, Secretary and Examiner.

Hotel Brunswick, Boston, June 25, 1889.

[This examination paper was prepared originally for a dinner of the Harvard Association of Western New York, held in Buffalo, January 15, 1887, but as the paper was made up entirely by a member of the class of 1880, it seemed allowable to use it again for our class dinner in 1889. The idea of a menu in this form came from Mr. J. B. Olmsted, '76, of Buffalo.]

ROME AND JUVENAL.*

(Commencement Day, June 30, 1880.)

Methought I stood in that eternal town
Whither hark all the memories of the world;
Not Rome of Frenchman, patriot, priest, or king,
But of the past, with all her temples lewd,
Her palaces, her theatres, her games,
Her rampant luxury, her famished poor,
Her streets, and forums, where oppression, lust,
And wrong might flaunt in the Italian sun,—
For did not a "bald Nero" rule the world?
Past me there swept the City's motley crowd:
The honest artisan, the dancing-girl,
The starveling Greek, with eyes that seek the ground,
The chariot bound for the Flaminian Way,
The boy with lagging step, urged on to school
By his stern pedagogue; the parasite
With eager talk, and angling for a meal.
And ever and anon are borne along
Sad faces with much beauty but more guilt;
Heavy-eyed women, pale and jaded men
Rank with the heavy perfumes of the feast,
Sick with the orgy of some Saturnal;
No joy there is, nor lightness in their air,
But all seem weighted with a weary life.

At length I joined the tide and onward passed,
Till 'neath a friendly jutting portico
I paused, to rest me in its grateful shade.
But not alone! A stern and silent man,
Clad in the stately garb of ancient Rome,
Smiles on his lips, but pity in his eyes,
Gazed at the rabble rout that eddied by,
And smiled, and clenched his hand, and smiled again,
Then turned to lay that hand upon my arm,
While from his heart there rose these burning words,
That fell on mine as lead upon a wound:
"An unstained youth — at least so Rumor says,—
Has left his hills for these polluted ways.
Oh! hie thee back before there comes a time
When without shuddering thou can'st gaze on crime.

* See page 55.

What is it tempts thee? Circus? Banquet-hall?
Foulest corruption trails her slime o'er all.
Hop'st thou to rise by vying with the Greek,
Who knows his patron's wishes ere he speak,
Who steals his wealth, his honor, and his child,
And leaves his household like his house, defiled?
Would'st, clad in rustic fashion, join the throng?
Know that to poverty insults belong.
Go to some wretch whose strength, not wealth declines,
And mingle reptile's venom with his wines.
Make thee the lover of some toothless crone,
Whose riches for her loathsomeness atone.
Your life's not safe in Rome; the bully's lure,
The informer's tongue, what flesh can these endure?
When thousand deaths at every turn one meets,
The wise man makes his will — then braves the streets.
Oh! had'st thou power from this foul sink to fly,
In Latium or the Sabine thou might'st buy
A small estate with all its rustic cheer
For what scarce serves to hire a dungeon here.
Nor chide the smallness of thy new domain;
To own one lizard is substantial gain.
Or is it that this rout have power to please?
What is't that charms? Their vice, or their disease?
Be not too hasty. Stand with me apart,
While anger gives me powers denied by art.—
Mark you yon noble dame go flaunting by!
She, Maevia, fights the boar with naked thigh.
That youth that careless guides his glittering car,
Signs with his whip, and greets his friends from far,
Too nice the language of his race to speak,
He lisps a pretty phrase in modish Greek.—
See yon Crispinus, once the scum of Nile,
Risen like Paris to a fame as vile,
From his bare arms the purple mantle fling,
And scarce support the weight of one small ring?
Surely this litter hides some man of state;
His four stout slaves plod, panting, 'neath his weight.
'Tis Marius, who robbed his maiden charge,
Turned her adrift to sin, or starve at large.—
A plundered province scarcely gluts the maw
Of one who 'gainst sham exile all foresaw.
When he has all he wishes, what the odds?
He smiles, and snaps his fingers at the gods.—

That downcast widow with dishevelled hair
Did for her lord a poisoned cup prepare.
Full of connubial care, the tender soul
Put in his trusting hand the deadly bowl.
Flushed with success, and confident of skill,
She shows her clumsier gossips how to kill.—
But why this hush? Why veiled is every eye?
The vice-queen, Messalina, passes by.
What pleases her is not for ears polite:
The king can do no wrong; the queen, no right.—
What boots it further to pursue the quest,
Or 'mongst the damned to seek one soul that's blest?
Is it ambition brings thee to these slums?
Listen, how Fortune to the venturous comes.
See'st thou yon pillar of worm-eaten wood?
'Tis where the statue of Sejanus stood.
One day the darling of Capraea's lord,
The next, abandoned to a vengeful horde.
Fallen, they find they never liked the man;
All cry, "The monster!" as his face they scan:
Then drag the carcass, careless where it rots,
And of the "enduring bronze" make spades or pots.
Would'st thou of Tully have the golden speech,
Skilled to upbraid, to praise, to charm, to teach?
Fool! Hold thy tongue, and keep the babbler in,
Lest it, too, suffer from some Fulvia's pin.—
Hast thou an itching for the spoils of war?
Pray for a cure to Genius or to Lar.
Of Hannibal, of Xerxes, what the gains?
Stripped of their spoils, a pinch of dust remains.
One sought a pittance at a stranger's gate,
And learned upon a master's will to wait;
The other, vanquished, seeks his native shore—
One skiff is left from all he had before.
That sea the poor, vain monarch bound with chains
Has risen and claimed her prey; and this remains.
Strive not these hollow blessings to obtain:
Power, honor, riches, all, I say, are vain.
But that thou may'st (for still 'tis good to prove Thy humble hope) ask something from above,
Approach thy God, to frame no wishes dare,
But with a steadfast heart be this thy prayer:
'Oh! Thou that see'st the wants of all our kind,
Grant me a sturdy frame, an upright mind,

That when the years thou givest me are past
I prove courageous to the very last.
A mind that ne'er by anger's blast is bent,
No prey to envy nor to discontent,
Which action and stern labor's test can please,
Rather than wine, or love, or slothful ease.'
But all this good thou may'st thyself procure ;
Man to be blest needs only to be pure."

I turned, and lo ! the satirist was gone,
Without a trace to mark him, save this one,
That where his path had been, amongst the throng,
There stretched an empty space, as when a scythe
Reaps its broad passage through the o'er ripe corn ;
Or as the baser beasts draw skulking back
When some great lion stalks superbly past,
So turned aside the idle plebs of Rome
Rather than meet the gaze of that stern man.

Oh ! Juvenal, thy passion, and thy hate,
Thy love of honesty, thy mocking laugh,
Still spread o'er Rome as doth the eagle's wing
Over a viper's nest. Thou had'st the soul
Of the Republic's heroes that were gone.
Thy lyre lacked no chord, thy scourge no thong ;
Thy characters were blood, thy language fire,
Through which thy victims move with quenchless pangs,
Shrouded in flame through twice a thousand years ;
Thy Rome still burns, a bonfire for the world.

CHARLES DUDLEY MARCH.

HARVARD COLLEGE. 1882–1890.

[I have taken the liberty of copying from the last report of the secretary of the class of 1882, an excellent statement of the recent changes at Harvard, which was written for that report by George Lyman Kittredge, '82. It states briefly and clearly exactly what those who live far from Cambridge, and those who have not kept track of the changes there, will be glad to know.]

"A comparison of the 1881-82 catalogue with that for 1889-90, shows the very great change that eight years have made in the personnel of the Faculty. In 1882 the instructors in the college (I leave the other departments of the university out of account) numbered seventy-four, fifty-five of whom were members of the Faculty. This year the whole number is one hundred and two, of whom sixty-six are members of the Faculty.* In spite of this increase, the last catalogue lacks many familiar names. Professor Francis Bowen, in our day very active in his duties, but since last year an Emeritus, has just died. His death, though one could hardly call it unexpected, was sudden, and almost to the last his well-known figure could be seen any day in the library or crossing the college yard. Professor Sophocles and Assistant Professor Jacquinot died in 1883, Professor Eustis in 1885, Professor Gurney in 1886, Professor Asa Gray in 1888. Professor Ernest Young, whom we knew as Instructor in History and Roman Law, died in the same year, shortly after his promotion to the Chair of History.

"Resignations, promotions and new appointments have all done their part to make the present roll of the Faculty unfamiliar to '82 eyes. Professor Lovering, after an unprecedented term of service — fifty years as full professor — resigned in 1888. His chair is filled by Professor B. O. Peirce, in our day Instructor in Mathematics. Dr. Gibbs, the

* It will be remembered that by the statutes, all instructors appointed for more than a year belong to the Faculty. Annually appointed instructers do not.

Rumford Professor, has also resigned, and Professor Trowbridge has taken his place. Neither Professor Lovering nor Professor Gibbs has disappeared from the catalogue, however, for both have been honored with the title of Emeritus by the Corporation. The resignation of Professor Torrey and of Professor James Russell Lowell followed hard upon the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the college. Both still appear in the Catalogue with the title of Emeritus. Mr. Macvane, whom we knew as Instructor in History, has succeeded to the McLean Professorship; but the chair left vacant by Professor Lowell has not yet been filled. Dr. F. G. Peabody has succeeded Dr. A. P. Peabody, now an Emeritus, in the Plummer Professorship of Christian Morals.

"Several names familiar to us as belonging to instructors or Assistant Professors are now followed by a higher title. Among these are Professors Greenough, Smith, C. J. White, J. W. White, Palmer (who has succeeded to the Alford Professorship, left vacant by the resignation of Professor Bowen), James, Emerton (now Winn Professor of Ecclesiastical History), Mark (now Hersey Professor of Anatomy). The Greek department has been strengthened by the appointment of Professor Wright, formerly of the Johns Hopkins University, but has lost Assistant Professors Dyer and Croswell, who resigned in 1887— the former to devote himself to literary work, the latter to take charge of a large school in New York City. The French department has three new Assistant Professors — Messrs. Cohn, Sanderson and Sumichrast; the German department, two — Drs. Francke and von Jagemann; the English department, two — Messrs. Briggs (who taught some of us the Odyssey in our freshman year) and Wendell; the History department two — Drs. Channing and Hart; the Philosophical department one — Dr. Royce; the Physical department one — Dr. Hall; the Political Economy department one — Dr. Taussig. Mr. Sheldon, in our day Instructor in Modern Languages, has for five years been Assistant Professor of Romance Philology. Mr. Davis, in 1882 Instructor in Geology, is now Assistant Professor of Physical Geography. Mr. W. S. Chaplin, the present Professor of Engineering, was appointed soon after the death of Professor Eustis, in 1885.

"The great increase in the number of students since 1882 has often been the subject of remark. The catalogue of 1882 showed 182 Seniors, 207 Juniors, 217 Sophomores, 217 Freshmen, and 34 unmatriculated students; in all, 857. The last catalogue shows 278 Seniors, 244 Juniors, 282 Sophomores, 323 Freshmen, and 144 special students, a total of 1,271. (The present number in all departments of the University is 2,079.) The class of special students corresponds in general to the old class of unmatriculated students, but it is held to a much stricter account. A special student must now do his work and pass his examinations like anybody else; and his selection of courses of study is made under the direction of a committee of the Faculty.

"The curriculum has broadened amazingly since 1882. It then included 67 three-hour courses, 25 two-hour courses, and 12 one-hour courses—104 in all. At present the Faculty offers 212 elective courses, classified as full courses (144), half courses (60), and courses that may be taken as either (8). The elective system has been extended to the work of the Freshman year.* The only studies now required of all candidates for the degree of A. B. are Rhetoric and English Composition (Freshman year), French or German (of such Freshmen as did not present both languages at the admission examinations), twelve Sophomore themes, eight forensics (four in the Junior and four in the Senior year), and a few lectures on Chemistry and Physics (the same that we were required to attend when Freshmen).†

"The principle of election, as is well known, has also been applied to the examinations for admission. The scheme of these examinations

* Freshmen are assisted in making their choices by a committee of the Faculty known as the Freshmen Advisers; but the Advisers have no power to dictate a student's course.

† The Lawrence Scientific School still maintains a prescribed curriculum.

is now very complicated on paper, though simple enough in practice. An impression once prevailed among the thoughtless that the new method, by allowing the omission of Greek, made it easier than before to enter Harvard College, but this was altogether a mistake. The equivalent demanded is quite as hard as Greek — to many men harder. In fact, only 6.42 per cent. of the candidates for admission last June and September omitted Greek altogether.

"There is a greater attempt made at present than in our day, it seems to me, to bring instructors and students together in informal ways. 'Seminaries,' conferences, societies that meet sometimes at the houses of instructors, sometimes in the rooms of students, and various other means tend directly to bring about such intercourse. And, in fact, the freedom with which students now consult their instructors, in the lecture-room or elsewhere, without any absurd fear of being regarded by their classmates as currying favor, is one of the pleasantest signs of the times. I can conceive nothing healthier than the present relations of instructors and students in the college.

"The Law School moved in 1883 from its wretchedly insufficient quarters to Austin Hall, the splendid gift of Edward Austin, Esq., of Boston. This building, which is one of the finest belonging to the University, cost $135,000. It stands in part on the site of the old Holmes house. The magnificent reading-room of Austin Hall is the envy of every department of the University. Dane Hall is now chiefly devoted to the uses of the Co-operative Society, which has had a continuous and generally prosperous career from its foundation in, I think, 1880, to the present time. The large down-stairs' lecture-room, formerly the law library and reading-room, is, however, retained for lectures on music and morals.

"In the same year the Medical School took possession of its new building on Boylston Street, which cost — land included — above $300,000. The old medical building is now occupied by the Dental School.

"The new building for the Divinity Library stands below Divinity Hall on the same side of the avenue. It was built in 1887, with funds raised by subscription, and contains, besides the fire-proof book-stack, a reading-room and lecture-rooms.

"The department of physics, which, when we were under-graduates, was packed away in various inconvenient corners in Harvard Hall and elsewhere, has now a commodious and thoroughly equipped building erected in 1884 — the Jefferson Physical Laboratory — the gift of T. Jefferson Coolidge, Esq. This laboratory, which cost $115,000, and which is supported by a fund of $75,000 raised by subscription, stands back of Lawrence Hall. A sufficient description of it may be found in the last catalogue, a copy of which was mailed to all graduates of the College whose addresses were known.

"The great University Museum, of which the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy formed in our time the most considerable part, has assumed almost stupendous proportions. 'Advances made by the Corporation within two years secured the completion of one section of the Oxford Street front of the University Museum. The subscription raised by Professor Goodale was sufficient for two-thirds of the remainder of the front, and the subscription raised by Professor Cooke suffices for the rest. Accordingly, the whole Oxford Street front is now built as far as the southwestern corner-block, and it is probable that a large part of this new structure will be occupied within the current year. Thus about three-quarters of the great quadrangle planned by Professor Agassiz in 1859, with what seemed to many a visionary enthusiasm, are already built. The floor area of the natural history portion of the museum, not including the Peabody Museum of Archæology, is four acres.' * This space is distributed among the departments of geology, zoölogy, botany and mineralogy in due proportion, not quite three-tenths being devoted to exhibition-rooms open to the public. The main entrance to the museum on Oxford Street is admirably simple and massive in design. The southwest corner-piece will eventually connect the building with the Peabody Museum, which, in its turn, has recently been enlarged by an addition fifty feet square and five stories high. A small portion of the building will be assigned to the Semitic Museum, for the establishment of which $10,000 has just been given by Mr. Jacob Schiff, of New York. A stroll down Divinity Avenue would, I think, effectually startle an alumnus who had not seen Cambridge for five years.

*President's Report for 1888-89, p. 33.

"Walter Hastings Hall, built with $250,000 bequeathed for that purpose by Walter Hastings, Esq., of Boston, stands on North Avenue, with Holmes Field behind it. The building was occupied for the first time this year. Its appearance has won praise even from the captious American Architect. The design is simple and dignified. 'The finishing of details is especially noteworthy, and the iron stairs and red brick walls and tiled floors of the hallways are a delight to the eye.'* The wall is built of Amboy brick of a peculiar brownish color.

"The bronze statue of John Harvard in the Delta, a little east of Memorial Hall, is the gift of Samuel J. Bridge. The statue — necessarily ideal — is a dignified sitting figure, the design of Daniel C. French.

"To the College Library some 90,000 volumes have been added since 1882, but this growth does not represent the whole increase in the usefulness of the library. The catalogue, which some of us remember as a hopeless puzzle, has been gradually brought into a condition approaching perfection, and various minor improvements, though in the aggregate considerable, have shown the library to be one of the best managed departments of the University. Unhappily, the building is altogether too small. The reading-room and the stack are both quite inadequate, and the pleasure one feels in seeing men at work, and so many of them, in Gore Hall is diminished by the knowledge that they are breathing bad air and injuring their eyes. The Divinity Library has been increased by the very valuable collection of Professor Ezra Abbott, generously given to the school by his widow. The Law Library has been enriched by a considerable book-fund, $20,000 of which came from Mr. Henry Villard.

Advocate*, January 17, 1890.

"Among the large gifts which the University has received since 1882 may be mentioned $111,000 from the estate of George B. Dorr; $100,000 from the Eben Wright fund; $164,000 from the estate of Robert Treat Paine (for the Observatory); $113,000 from the bequest of Francis E. Parker; $158,000 from the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Gurney; $237,000 for the Observatory from the Boyden fund; $80,000 from H. T. Morgan; $50,000 from the estate of J. S. Wheeler; $40,000 from the estate of John A. Lowell; $90,000 for the Law School from an anonymous benefactor; $50,000 for a telescope from Miss Bruce of New York. The largest gift has been the bequest of E. Price Greenleaf of Boston. This amounted to about $700,000, part of which is to be applied to scholarships and other pecuniary aid, the rest to the uses of the library. 'The private outlays of Mr. Alexander Agassiz for the benefit of the Museum have amounted, with his public gifts to the Museum fund and to other departments of the University, to more than half a million dollars during the past 13 years.' (Treasurer's Statement, 1884). Besides Professor Gurney, two other instructors have taken their places among the benefactors of the University — Professor Sophocles, who left the college about $25,000 for the purchase of Greek, Latin and Arabic books, and Professor Asa Gray, whose legacy consisted of his valuable copyrights. Large amounts for various purposes have been raised by subscription. Of special interest is the gift of $200,000 just received from an unnamed benefactor, to serve as the nucleus of a retiring fund for professors.

"Two publishing funds have been established, one of $15,000 by John E. Thayer, '85, for the Quarterly Journal of Economics; the other of $6,000 by the Class of 1856 for the Harvard Studies in Classical Philology. In 1885 Professor Tyndall, out of the proceeds of his lectures delivered in America in 1872, gave the college $10,800 to found a Fellowship for the study of Physics.

"The marking system has been materially modified since 1882. Instead of definite percentages the student now receives in each course one of five marks, A, B, C, D, E. E indicates failure, and B puts a man on the rank-list. E in two and a half full courses, or less than C in more than three full courses, drops a man. The new system works well, and I doubt if either instructors or students would contemplate with patience a return to the old.

"The experiment of voluntary prayers, begun in 1886, has proved highly successful. The number of students who choose to go to chapel in the morning is very considerable, and the Thursday vesper services are surprisingly well attended. The undergraduates appreciate the advantages of the present system of University preachers, and the gentlemen who consent to serve in that capacity see no reason to regret the abandonment of the old principle of compulsory attendance.

"Of the college papers, the Advocate and the Lampoon are alone left in their original shape. The Crimson is now a daily newspaper, having consolidated with the Herald. The Harvard Monthly, a forty-two page magazine, established in 1885, 'is intended,' in the language of its prospectus, 'first of all, to serve as a medium for the publication of the best literary work that is produced by the students of the University.' In addition, 'each number contains an article from some prominent alumnus.' The Harvard Law Review, a publication in every way creditable to the University, was founded in 1887.

"The multiplication of student societies still continues. The last Index contains the following names unknown eight years ago. The Classical Club (founded in 1885), La Conférence Française (in '86) Deutscher Verein (in '86), English Club (in '89), Boylston Chemical Club (in '87), Electrical Club (in '88), Free Wool Club, Total Abstinence League (in '88), Camera Club (in '88), Banjo Club (in '86), Guitar and Mandolin Club (in '87), Sparring Association (in '87),

'Varsity Club (in '86), Canoe Club (in '84), Andover Club (in '88), Exeter Club (in '89), Southern Club (in '88), Minnesota Club (in '88), Connecticut Club (in '88), Graduate Club (in '89), Phi Delta Phi (Choate Chapter, '86). The Harvard Law School Association was founded in 1886.

"The Foxcroft Club, established in 1889, occupies by a grant from the Corporation the ground floor of Foxcroft House, a large dwelling house on the corner of Oxford and Kirkland streets, recently purchased by the College for use as a dormitory. The club has three large studies, or reading-rooms, which are primarily of use to students who live out of Cambridge, and a dining-room, in which it furnishes plain, well-cooked meals, of good quality. Each member pays for what he eats and for no more. This plan enables a man to fix his board at a price that suits his pocket. The average is not far from $2.75 a week.

"The Athletic Committee requires a word, not only for its importance, but because of the many misconceptions that prevail as to its purpose, functions and powers. This committee, established by the Corporation in 1888, consists of three members of the College Faculty and three graduates (all six appointed by the Corporation) and of three undergraduates elected by the Presidents of the three upper classes, and by a representative from each of the athletic organizations. With such a membership, all sides must get a hearing. 'This committee,' in the language of the vote which established it, 'has entire supervision and control of all athletic exercises within and without the precincts of the University.' In the management of athletic sports, the determination of what games shall be played, and where and with whom, the regulations concerning trainers, etc., the committee acts independently of the Faculty. It is a common mistake to say that the Faculty has decreed thus and thus with respect to athletics. The decrees come from the Committee on the Regulation of Athletics, and are neither suggested by the Faculty nor revised by them. The relations between the committee and the undergraduates are of the most cordial kind. To the graduate treasurer appointed by the committee the undergraduate treasurers of the various organizations are responsible. This business-like arrangement, entered into by general consent, is found to work well.

"Various measures have been taken to promote the physical welfare of the students. Two new ball-fields have been provided to the eastward of Divinity Hall. The new building containing five courts, etc., for the use of the nine, will be ready this spring. It is the gift of Mr. H. R. A. Carey, formerly a special student, and will cost $36,000. It stands on the northern edge of Holmes Field.

"One of the most promising gifts in the direction of physical training is the new boat-house, just presented (March 24) to the students by Mr. George W. Weld, '60. This stands on the river front about half a mile above the old boat-house, very near the Allston Bridge. It has shower baths, broad piazzas, and ample room for lockers, of which about 200 have already been put in. The number of boats at present provided, ranging from four oars, suitable for racing, to ordinary boats of heavier or less expensive build, is sufficient to float 70 men at a time. More will be added; and there is room besides for the storage of a great number of private boats or canoes.

"It is the purpose of Mr. Weld to encourage rowing as a form of healthful exercise among students not members of any crew. The property is held by five graduate trustees, but is managed by an undergraduate committee."

CLASS FINANCES.

On June 1, 1890, the class had in the Erie County Savings Bank $1,586.99, and also held a six per cent. mortgage on a house and lot in Buffalo for $935, making a total of $2,521.99.

The mortgage was bought March 27, 1888, with the advice and consent of the Class Committee, and is well secured. The $1,000 Marion & McPherson 7 per cent. Bond, granted by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, bought November 24, 1882, at 114, was sold January 30, 1889, on account of the troubles of the Atchison road, at the same figure, 114, so that for nearly seven years it paid the class seven per cent. With the proceeds, and some money in the bank, an excellent mortgage on Buffalo property for $1,550 was bought, but this mortgage contained a privilege of payment, and was paid up on April 5, 1890. A new 6 per cent. mortgage in Buffalo for $1,500 was soon found, June 6, 1890, and this mortgage cannot be paid until 1895.

The following table shows the large amount still unpaid on the subscriptions to the Class Fund, made ten years ago:

AMOUNTS DUE AND UNPAID.

						$1,436.99

The annual transfers from the College Fund to the Window Fund in the class accounts are due to the fact that when the Window Fund was started subscriptions amounting to $392 were transferred from the College to the Window Fund by the subscribers. Instead of transferring the whole amount at once, one tenth of the whole, or $39.20, is transferred from each of the ten instalments of the College Fund.

The contribution of $150 from the College Fund to help defray the expenses of the college in celebrating its 250th anniversary was made by direction of the Class Committee.
